BOOKIES ORGANIZE FIGHT AGAINST LAW ENFORCEMENT; TO RAISE FUND OF $100,000

DISCUSSING WAYS OF CONTINUING IN GETTING BUSINESS

The Proposal Is to Close Down Awhile, Remove Shops From Main Streets, Then Reopen in Less Noticed Spots.

USE RADIO IF THEY LOSE PHONES

Smuggling Commissioners say the Drive Will Never Stop Them—'We've Had This Thing Before and It Just Means Waiting.'

Handbook operators of St. Louis are seeking a means to combat threatened action of the authorities which would put them out of business, are contributing to a fund, said to be $100,000, with which they intend to move against them.

Some of the attendees at meetings held Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons which the strategy of their defense was being planned. This included closing their places for a while and ultimately taking them out of the prominent position they now occupy in street corners and hiding them in upstairs and alleys.

Plans of communication which will be used in the event the Circuit Attorney and telephone company combine to remove telephones are also being discussed. One suggestion which has been made is the use of a short-range radio.

Some of the Big Shops Worried. Owners of some of the larger and more prosperous shops are worried at the telephone machines which had been installed in recent years and which they are receiving and using off bets.

They are concerned that these machines may be considered as a device and would, therefore, be the means of bringing them down on the charge of setting up a gambling device.

Telephone machines permit immediate communication between two points. They are a typewriter keyboard, permit an operator to type out a message which is instantaneously typed out on ticker tape on the living part of any machine which may be connected with the living apparatus.

Still now the Circuit Attorney has always maintained that it is difficult to make a case in court against bookmakers because of inability to obtain evidence that they actually took a bet. Owners of the machines which are now afraid that the machines will be enough to make a case against them.

The machines bring them racing information and bets and also help them to take part of a bet which is too large for them to accept alone.

A Long Wait Predicted. A downtown bookmaker who confided that the handbook fraternity "plenty worried," predicted, however, that it would take a long time before any prospective action against them would take effect.

"They'll get injunctions and that sort of thing," he said. "You know, it's no trouble getting injunctions here."

He drove against bookmakers never stop them, though. If phones are taken away, they'll set up a radio or something like that. We've had this thing before the next day it just meant waiting the next day to pay off after the money had been published in racing papers.

Of course, some of the bookies have brought all this on themselves. They've been too open some of them didn't even bother to set up a front or blind. You look right in the door and see a lot of people sitting at the tables playing the horses. That's caused people to write letters to the authorities.

POLICE PURCHASE 'DRUNKOMETER' TO TEST AUTO DRIVERS

Device Shows Amount of Alcohol in Breath; Two Methods of Telling.

A "drunkometer," device to test the amount of alcohol present in the breath, has been purchased by the Police Department for $87.50. It will be used at first in experimental work in the department laboratory and then, as in other cities, used in testing automobile drivers for intoxication.

The apparatus was developed by Dr. R. N. Harger of Indiana University School of Medicine. If the person being tested is willing to cooperate he blows into a balloon, or, if unwilling, a tube is placed near his nostrils to get a breath sample. Then the sample is passed through a solution of potassium permanganate and sulfuric acid, which is deep purple in color. When alcohol is introduced the color changes to yellow.

Having determined the presence of alcohol, the breath is then passed into a second tube which contains a chemical mixture. The breath is absorbed, weighed and the amount of alcohol present is determined.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC TO GIVE ROOSEVELT A MAHOGANY BOAT

President Is Said to Have Approved Blueprints of $30,000 Fishing Sloop.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 1.—Capt. Bill McCoy, Palm Beach apartment house owner, said yesterday he had been asked to supervise the building of a $30,000 mahogany fishing sloop to be presented to President Roosevelt by the Dominican Republic, to show the high regard the people of the island have for the President.

McCoy has completed blueprints which have been approved by President Roosevelt, he said.

EARLY SMOKE PALL OVER CITY

It Extends as Far West as Richmond Heights and Maplewood.

A smoke pall extending as far west as Richmond Heights, Maplewood and Webster Groves, hung over most of St. Louis this morning, causing motorists in some sections to use their headlights and limiting visibility to as low as 400 feet.

The weather bureau, describing the situation as "dense smoke in lower atmosphere," said wind velocity was nine miles in the southwest direction. Lambert Field reported one-fifth mile visibility because of smoke with no anticipated interference with airline operation, although student and local planes were grounded until the air cleared. Attempts there said the smoke "closed in" about 6 a. m.

ARMY CALLS FOR GREATER SPEED IN MUNITION-MAKING

Designs Must Be Simplified and Mass Production Plans Hastened, Procurement Men Are Told.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Army gave orders today to rush preparations for production of munitions.

Louis Johnson, assistant Secretary of War, told more than 200 Army procurement specialists that in the event of war the High Command did not "want the experience of 1917-18 repeated."

Designs for arms and supplies must be simplified and arrangements speeded for mass production, he advised, both to meet any war emergency and to cope with increased orders resulting from President Roosevelt's proposals to reinforce national defenses.

"We hope Congress will give us a sufficient stock of munitions to tide us over until industry is ready," he said.

Johnson, one of the President's principal advisers on the prospective rearmament program, summoned the Army officers to the first national conference of the kind. The War Department has been making industrial mobilization plans since passage of the 1920 National Defense Act, but previous sessions of officers detailed to work with industrial plants have been on a seasonal basis.

10,000 Plants Given Schedules. "We have selected 10,000 plants to which we have given definite war schedules of production," Johnson said in discussing preparations for a future war, but numerous production "bottlenecks" must be broken, he added.

"There are still more than 25 per cent of our items, many of them vital, for which specifications and drawings have not been completed," he said.

Of 7800 articles or production processes figuring in War Department plans, he said 55 critical items were "so difficult of production, so different from ordinary peacetime needs that industry will not be able to produce them in mass without some education."

Congress provided $2,000,000 this year for "educational orders" for five of the 55 critical items. Johnson said funds would be asked for at the next session to train industry to turn out the remaining 50.

Cites "Certain Foreign Countries." Urging simplification of military machines and weapons, the assistant Secretary, apparently referring to Germany, told the officers that "in a certain foreign country" designers "strip all non-essentials from their important items of war equipment."

He said in the single-aster fighting airplane of that country, radio equipment has been made ready removable to make way for extra ammunition, and the cockpit has been reduced in size to accommodate only small men.

As immediate objectives, Johnson specified:

1. Establishment of standard types for all critical arms and supplies, and completion of all drawings and data.

2. Completion of industrial surveys to establish the capacity of all plants.

3. Training of factories by means of current and "educational" orders.

4. Completion of organization and training of personnel needed to expand supply organizations to war strength.

5. Early completion of simple contract forms "adequate for all anticipated war conditions."

Pittman Says U. S. Must Be Ready to Fight Any Two Naval Powers. Senator Pittman (Dem., Nev.) asserted today that under its present policy of "non-alliance, non-interference and non-intervention" with foreign nations, the United States must be prepared to defend itself against any two world naval powers.

Pittman, who as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee often speaks for the administration, expressed belief "our present air and naval forces are not sufficient to meet such an emergency."

"I think all the major events that have taken place in the world in the last few months clearly demonstrate that there can be no reliance for safety except to be prepared to meet force with force," he said.

DEPRESSION LOSS IN WAGES PUT AT $119,000,000,000

Isador Lubin First to Testify in Monopoly Inquiry Says Farmer Got $38,000,000,000 Less.

SLUMP COMPARED WITH 1929 LEVEL

Business Decline Has Cost Every Man, Woman and Child in Nation Average of $1000.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—In a furious blast of publicity the anti-monopoly committee today began its long-awaited investigation, with Commissioner Isador Lubin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Department of Labor explaining to the committee and an audience that packed the largest hearing room in the Senate office building the significance of a series of charts dealing with the national income and population growth.

With the air of a school master, pointer in hand, Lubin elaborated on the fundamentals of the national economy. It was a rudimentary lesson that he illustrated for the official audience that had crowded into the marble cavernous room, most of the facts about the impact of the depression on the national life having been taken from Government reports of the last few years.

Pictures Come First. Start of actual testimony was delayed half an hour to give still and movie cameras men their full opportunity. News-reel camera men had focused a battery of lights on the 15 members of the committee grouped around two sides of a long table.

For the benefit of the sound camera, Chairman O'Mahoney read a statement in which he again, by implication at least, reassured business that the investigation would be conducted in a "dispassionate" manner.

"The members of the committee are deeply sensible of the responsibility that rests upon them to utilize the broad powers which they have been invested solely for the public good," O'Mahoney said. "No personal partisan or factional program is controlling here. The processes of the committee will not be used for any purpose save to develop economic facts which in the very nature of this must be widely comprehended before any constructive recommendations may be outlined."

Cards of Admission. So insistent had been the advance demand for admission to the hearings that the committee resorted to the expedient of issuing cards of admission without which mere spectators were not allowed in the caucus room. Every seat was taken long before the first hearing started and nearly a hundred newspaper men were seated at press tables on either side of the committee.

A special press table was provided for representatives of trade journals and similar publications with a special interest in the inquiry.

At this first hearing all members of the committee, both congressional and departmental, were present. Even some alternates, designated to represent the departmental members when they cannot participate, were seated around the committee table. There were some curious contrasts, Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission, generally regarded as an arch apostle of the New Deal, was seated next to the ultra-conservative Senator William H. King of Utah.

Loss in Wages and Salaries. Lubin told the committee that the loss in wages and salaries resulting from unemployment during the depression "exceeded $119,000,000,000, a sum which is 40 per cent greater than the peak total national income of the country in 1929."

"If the income of our farmers had been maintained at the 1929 level," said Lubin, a former professor of economics at the University of Missouri, "their total gross income over the past nine years would have aggregated $38,000,000,000 more than they actually received. The cumulative loss to our agricultural population was equal to more than three times their income in 1929. Had it been possible to maintain dividend payments at the 1929 level, the income of stockholders would have been $20,000,000,000 greater, a sum which is more than three times greater than the amount paid out at the height of prosperity."

The "cumulative loss" Lubin put at more than $122,000,000,000. In other words, he added, had our...

LAMMOT DU PONT FOR HIGH PAY, NOT PROFIT-SHARING

Manufacturer Tells Senators It Is Difficult to Share Gains Without Sharing Losses.

FRANK GANNETT TAKES OTHER VIEW

Publisher Asserts Plan Deserving of Workers' Confidence Would Reduce Number of Strikes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Lammot du Pont is opposed to profit-sharing systems, he told a Senate committee today, and believes instead in "paying high wages based on efficient performance."

The Delaware industrialist, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., added the comment that "it is difficult to share profits without sharing losses."

His appearance followed that of Frank Gannett, newspaper publisher, who foresaw "the dawn of a new day for America" if the nation's industry would establish profit-sharing systems which deserved the confidence of workers.

Du Pont told of his company's bonus system, under which he said employees received $7,593,000 for "conspicuous service, ability, efficiency and loyalty."

He opposed proposals for "incentive taxation" and urged adoption of a system "which recognizes that under our competitive system profits are usually large only where the risks have been great and management has been sound and progressive."

Gannett's view was that a widespread system of profit-sharing would cut down the number of strikes, "for the worker would understand that to tie up the production of a factory would be to lessen his own reward."

Du Pont States Objections. "Profit-sharing as commonly understood and practiced, has, I believe, frequently proved to be unsatisfactory," du Pont said, "because it has sometimes been used as a substitute for higher wages, and has at any rate usually introduced an added element of uncertainty in the worker's income."

"It seems to me that in general those directly responsible for the management of a business, as well as the stockholders or owners, should properly share the greater risks. Their rewards should be higher when the business is prosperous, and less when times are hard. Where I believe the aim should be to make the worker's income as stable as possible at a relatively high level, always with opportunities for personal advancement as merit is demonstrated."

Du Pont gave the committee comparative figures for 1929 and 1937 showing the relation between du Pont enterprises and manufacturing generally. The number of du Pont wage earners increased 28 per cent during the period as compared with a decrease of 2 per cent for manufacturers generally. Du Pont wages increased 48 per cent, while general manufacturing wages dropped 7.6 per cent, he said.

Against "Incentive Tax." Discussing the proposed "incentive taxation" under which concessions would be made to employers who adopted profit-sharing plans, du Pont said:

"To reward one line of action through tax abatement is equivalent to penalizing an opposite policy," he said. "Conditions vary so widely from industry to industry, from company to company, and from time to time, that the problem of 'incentive' taxation seems to me a very ticklish one."

"Although at one time such a policy might seem to encourage certain portions of the business community, yet, once the principle is established, it can readily be used for ends definitely harmful to business, thus creating even greater uncertainty."

The Gannett Plan. Gannett, who publishes 18 newspapers, outlined a profit-sharing plan he put into effect in his organization in 1936 and which, changed somewhat subsequently, he described as "highly satisfactory."

The organization, he explained, set aside 10 per cent of the profit of each company for division among the workers on a pro-rata share of their earnings for the preceding five years. He said the wage dividends distributed last year under the plan almost equaled the total...

25 CHILDREN KILLED WHEN TRAIN STRIKES SCHOOL BUS IN UTAH

Utah School Bus Crash

PART of the shattered school bus crumpled beneath the front of the freight locomotive near Salt Lake City.

DRIVER ALSO DEAD; 12 STUDENTS HURT IN CROSSING CRASH

Collision Occurs in Steel Storm Near Midvale, South of Salt Lake City—Young People on the Way to Classes.

BODIES SCATTERED ALONG THE TRACKS

Grief-Stricken Parents Gather at Scene—Vehicle Said to Have Stopped Before It Was Hit by Freight Locomotive.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 1.—A fast freight train crashed into a school bus in a steel storm near here today, killing 25 children and seriously injuring at least 12 others. The bus driver also was killed.

The bodies were taken to undertaking establishments here and attempts were being made to find relatives to assist in identification. The 12 seriously injured were taken to Salt Lake County Hospital. Nine other students, only slightly hurt, were released after hospital examination.

Crash at Rural Crossing. The scene of the crash, a rural crossing, is two miles south of Midvale, a community south of Salt Lake City. The students, ranging in age from 12 to 18 years, were en route to their classes at Jordan High School.

The steel storm had reduced visibility and the Denver & Rio Grande Western freight, "The Flying Ute," was an hour late when the crash occurred at 8:56 a. m. The train was traveling 52 miles an hour at the time.

The driver of the bus was Farrell Silcox.

The bus apparently stopped before making a sharp turn on to the tracks. Silcox, his vision obviously obscured, then drove on to the tracks.

Sheriff S. Grant Young said the frame of the bus was bent around the engine and dragged down the track.

Dr. J. S. Alley of Midvale said the freight train about had a mile long, struck the bus broadside. It was traveling so fast the caboose was on the crossing by the time it stopped.

"The cab of the bus was tossed to one side, about 100 feet from the crossing. Bodies were strewn everywhere for a quarter of a mile down the track."

Story of Man on Train. "It was the scariest thing I ever saw," David Winter, 22 years old, of Denver, riding on an oil tank close to the freight engine, said. "It was storming pretty hard," he related. "All of a sudden I felt a terrific bump... Finally the train pulled to a stop."

"I got off. One little girl was standing there screaming, holding for dear life to a little pocketbook. It was raining so hard."

"None of them seemed to die right away. One by one they would stop screaming. One boy had virtually all of his clothes stripped off him."

For hundreds of feet down the railroad tracks books, clothes, handkerchiefs, even shoes, were scattered.

Girl's Description of Crash. Margie Groves, 16-year-old student from South Jordan, described the crash:

"I got on the bus at 8:30 about two miles from the crossing. I think there must have been about 40 others in the bus with me."

"When we came to the crossing, we stopped and Mr. Silcox, the bus driver, started up again. I was sitting in the very back in the center, but I couldn't see much because of the storm."

"I thought I heard someone yell 'Train!' and then I saw something black coming from the right and then it hit us."

"When I woke up I was lying in the snow near the bus. Two stu-

KANSAS CITY, KAN., WILL KEEP PWA GRANT, ICKES DECLARES

He Is Unperturbed by Complaint From Adjoining City Against $1,710,000 Allotment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes said today the Public Works Administration would not rescind a $1,710,000 grant for a Kansas City, Kan., railroad produce market "unless something comes up which causes us to take a new look."

Ickes commented on a petition filed with the PWA by Turney Gratz, secretary-manager of the Produce Dealers' Division of the Kansas City (Mo.) Northside Business and Improvement Association, asking that the grant be rescinded. The petition stated misrepresentations were made by Kansas City, Kan., in obtaining approval of the grant.

Ickes said he had considered carefully charges made heretofore and "felt there was nothing in them which would justify us in rescinding the allotment."

"It's a fight between two cities," he said. "Kansas City, Kan., wants a market. It went to the Department of Agriculture and got a strong endorsement from the Secretary of Agriculture."

The body, found by two highway maintenance employees on their way to work, was in a sitting position on the shoulder of the road, the head bent forward and hands folded in the lap. A .32-caliber automatic pistol lay three feet away.

Powder burns circled the wound, in the left side of the chest, but the zipper of a leather jacket was pulled almost all the way to the collar. This circumstance, together with the position of the body and pistol, led to the theory of murder rather than suicide.

There were four cartridges in the pistol magazine. The number of the weapon had been obliterated by filing, but Chief of Police Elmer Winter of Highland took it to the St. Louis Police Headquarters, where the number was made legible by heat and chemical treatment. No finger prints could be taken from the pistol.

Winter also turned over copies of the dead man's finger prints to St. Louis police, who found no record of them in the identification bureau.

The body was found by Chief Winter's nephew, James Winter, and a fellow worker, who immediately drove into Highland, 30 miles east of St. Louis, and notified the police chief. The body was taken to a Highland mortuary.

The man was about five feet, eight inches tall, weighed 135 pounds and had gray eyes and brown hair, slightly gray at the temples. The nose was prominent and teeth irregular. Palms of the hands were heavily calloused. There was a faint scar over the right eye.

He was wearing blue trousers of good material, with overalls over them, a blue and white striped broadcloth shirt and a dark woolen fur-lined cap with a peak. In the pockets were a pair of silver-rimmed glasses and a handkerchief bearing the letter "C."

MAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH BESIDE ROAD IN ILLINOIS

Powder - Burned Bullet Wound in Chest of Victim of About 48, Discovered Near Highland.

An unidentified man about 48 years old was found shot to death at 7 o'clock this morning at the edge of United States Highway 40, two and one-half miles west of Highland, Ill. There was a bullet wound in the chest, and authorities expressed the opinion he had been murdered.

MARTIN TESTIFIES AT RED HEARING; 40 MINUTES LATE

UAWA Chief Says He Finally Appears Before Dies Only Because He Is Under Subpena.

CALLS JUDGE AN AID OF DETROIT FASCISTS

Promises to Name University of Michigan Professor Who Uses Class for Nazi Propaganda.

By RICHARD L. STOKES, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—After having obtained five postponements and having made necessary the issuance of a subpoena to compel attendance, Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, kept Congressman Martin Dies waiting 40 minutes this morning before finally appearing as a witness before the Texas committee investigating un-American activities.

The young labor chieftain, wearing glasses and with hair parted neatly at the center, testified that he had been educated for the ministry at William Jewell College at Liberty, Mo., and held a pastorate for five years at Kansas City, Mo.

He entered the labor union movement in 1923, he said, when he was elected vice-president of a Kansas City local of Chevrolet and Fisher Body Workers. Early in 1936 he went to Detroit as vice-president of the UAWA and in April of that year was elected president.

In reply to a question, he stated he would not have appeared before the committee unless he had been forced by subpoena to do so.

The UAWA, he asserted, has 350,000 members, mostly in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Tells of Fascists in Detroit.
"Have you of your own knowledge any individuals in your union who are sympathetic to Nazi, Fascist or Communist activities in Detroit?" asked Dies.

"I have," replied Martin. In reply to further questions, he read messages from a prepared statement.

He stated that Detroit has a large Italian population, and that internal efforts have been made to reduce them to "willing tools of the Fascist Government." As a leader in this campaign he named circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola of Flint, a former witness before the committee.

"Judge Gadola," Martin said, "has been seen many times at Fascist meetings, and is reliably reported to have participated in a campaign to raise money in support of Mussolini's aggression against Ethiopia. Gadola is a notable hater of organized labor."

As a former chieftain of Fascists in Detroit, the witness mentioned Giacomo Ungarilli, one time Italian Consul in that city, who, according to Martin's information, was transferred there from Rio de Janeiro because of his successful methods of terrorism in forcing business of the city to the Fascist party. Ungarilli used the same system so actively in Detroit, according to Martin, that his recall was demanded by the United States Government, after which Mussolini exiled him to a post on the edge of the Sahara Desert.

Links Fascists to Bund.
"The Fascist groups in Detroit," said Martin, "have a close working arrangement with the German Bund, a Nazi organization."

"We have numerous photographs," interrupted Dies, "showing fraternization between these two groups."

The Nazi leader, Martin said, is supposed to be Fritz Heller, an American citizen and a Detroit lawyer. The witness promised to supply confidentially to the committee the name of a professor at the University of Michigan who, he said, uses his classroom as a platform for Nazi propaganda.

than Nazism and Fascism. All are enemies of democracy.

A slight passage of arms arose from Martin's protest against indiscriminately labeling persons as Communists. Dies interrupted with the remark that similar objection could be made against calling people "torians" and "reactionaries."

Congressman Joe Starns of Alabama, a member of the committee, shouted that "human rights come first, but next are respect for property and the capitalist system."

"Special privilege," Martin countered, "is the greatest danger to the country." Dies hastened to say that "this is true of privileged groups as well as privileged money."

Martin's Prepared Statement.
In opposition to the generally sympathetic attitude between the witness and members of the committee which obtained in public, Martin distributed a statement beginning with a declaration that "only respect for the law of the land causes me to come here this time."

The statement continued: "When the Dies Committee was appointed, the hope was expressed—one which I shared—that a sincere and honest inquiry would be conducted into the dangerous activities being carried on by foreign totalitarian governments in this country. However, this committee had not functioned very long when it became manifest that its alleged objectives were being missed, and that by the ill-prepared and loose presentation of reckless statements by irresponsible witnesses, grave doubts were being created as to the reliability and veracity of the charges made."

"Moreover, an unfortunate parade of questionable witnesses by whom outstanding patriotic and law-abiding citizens were being indiscriminately attacked and charged with being Communists created a definite feeling, universally entertained, that the committee could and would not make any real contribution to the solution of the problem."

"It is a most lamentable situation when a committee for the House of Representatives, supposed to carry out an impartial investigation of activities alien and dangerous to the best interests of our nation, carrying on in such a manner as to be universally recognized as a political tool in the hands of reactionary and vested interests in their efforts to defeat honest, intelligent and progressive statesmen."

Martin on UAWA Reds.
The constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, according to the statement, refuses membership to members of the Communist party.

A passage was read from a purported radio address by Martin that "I told John L. Lewis in his own office that John Brophy had surrounded him with Communists."

The witness amended this to say that he told the CIO president in his office there were many Communists in the organization.

I named them, too," declared Martin. "Now the condition has largely been remedied."

VALIDITY OF EDENBORN WILL UP TO COURT

Argument Involving $50,000, 000 Estate Heard by Louisiana Judge.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 1.—Whether William Edenborn, former St. Louisan, builder of the Louisiana & Arkansas railroad, left a valid will disposing of his $50,000,000 estate, is a question to be decided by Judge Robert J. O'Neal of Caddo Parish District Court.

Attorneys' arguments were heard yesterday, and the court allowed 30 days for the filing of briefs. The will was filed in court in May, 1938, 10 years after Edenborn's death, and as the result of a suit filed by seven persons claiming the relationship of nephews and nieces.

It had been stated, before that time, that Edenborn left no will. Mrs. Sarah Drain Edenborn of Shreveport, widow of the railroad builder and defendant in the suit brought by nephews and nieces, produced the will in response to a court order, but contended, and her attorneys still contend, that the will was revoked.

Argument yesterday centered around a receipt for the will filed in 1908 with the St. Louis Union Trust Co., which was the executor of the will.

The receipt, which was signed by Mrs. Edenborn, stated that she had received the will from the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and that she had read and approved it.

The receipt also stated that the will was signed by William Edenborn in the presence of three witnesses, and that it was signed in the presence of the executor of the will.

The receipt further stated that the will was signed in the presence of the executor of the will, and that it was signed in the presence of the executor of the will.

25 PUPILS KILLED WHEN TRAIN HITS UTAH SCHOOL BUS

dents I know, Mack Bateman and Mabel Smith, were nearby. Mabel was lying near the bus and Mack was lying near the train. I guess they're all right now.

There was an awful lot of screaming and moaning. They were all just kids.

"And then they came and brought me to the hospital."

Mrs. Sarah Bateman, business superintendent of the Salt Lake General Hospital, said she aided in the recovery of 18 bodies.

Grief-stricken parents, hysterical and weeping, rushed frantically up and down the 25-car train, trying to find their children.

The parents lifted blankets and coats and papers from the bodies. There were sobs and shrieking as bodies were recognized.

Volunteers walked up and down the train to pick up the mangled bodies. Many of them were mutilated past recognition. They were taken away in trucks.

The children had been picked up by the bus at Bluffdale, Riverton, South Jordan, Crescent and Herriman, all in communities south of Salt Lake City.

The identified dead included Silko, Dean Winward, Kenneth C. Peterson, B. H. Glasser, Boyd Larson, Helen Young, Helen Lloyd, Harold Sanstrom, Louis Johnston, Don Silcock, Elaine Page, Rae Miller and Rosa Larsen.

The hospital was jammed with parents. Fathers wept openly and mothers screamed. Attaches had been sent to the school rooms for persons who fainted. One entire floor of the hospital was filled with crash victims.

The train was manned by Engineer E. L. Reahmer and Conductor J. P. Ryan, both of Salt Lake City. It was northbound; the bus eastbound.

Sheriff Young said Reahmer told him he was on the right side of the cab and that the bus was coming from the left. His fireman shouted for him to stop, he said.

Ford Says Refugee Jews Would Be Asset to U. S.

Favors Admitting as Many as Possible Under Selective Quota—Promises to Help Them Rebuild Lives in America.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Dec. 1.—Henry Ford, who has been accused of being anti-Semitic, says the admission under immigration quotas of Jews seeking a haven from Nazi persecution would give "a new impetus" to American business.

The automobile manufacturer, who was decorated by the German Government on his seventy-fifth birthday last July 30, made that assertion in a statement last night after conferring in his Dearborn office with Rabbi Leo M. Franklin of Temple Beth El, Detroit.

Referring to the Grand Cross of the Order of the German Eagle which Chancellor Hitler conferred on him, Ford said:

"My acceptance of a medal from the German people does not, as some seem to think, involve any sympathy on my part with Nazism. Those who have known me for many years realize that anything that breeds hate is repulsive to me."

"It is my opinion that the German people, as a whole, are not in sympathy with their rulers in their anti-Jewish policies, which is the work of a few war-makers at the top."

America's Traditional Role.
"I believe that the United States cannot fall at this time to maintain its traditional role as a haven for the oppressed. I am convinced, not only that this country could absorb many of the victims who must find a refuge outside of their native lands, but that as many of them as could be admitted under our selective quota system would constitute a real asset to our country."

Because of their special adaptability in the fields of production, distribution and agriculture, they would offer to the business of the country a new impetus at a time like this, when it is badly needed.

"I am confident that the time is near when there will be no more jobs available in this country than the entrance of a few thousand Jews, or other immigrants, will be negligible."

"I believe that the return-to-land movement is one of the ultimate solutions of our economic problems, and in this movement the Jews of the Old World can play a significant part. I am wholly sympathetic with the movement to give the oppressed Jew an opportunity to rebuild his life in this country, and I, myself, will do everything possible toward that end."

Jews in Ford Plants.
"Hundreds of Jewish men have been employed in our plants show me ability and loyalty, and if the business over among them is sometimes comparatively high, it is indicative of their ambition to improve themselves."

Fritz Haller, German Consul here, in presenting the medal to Ford last summer, said it was a token of Hitler's admiration. Ford's response was: "Thank you very much."

In 1927, a $1,000,000 Hibel suit was filed against Ford for an alleged anti-Jewish campaign in his Dearborn Independent. The case was settled out of court and Ford disavowed the weekly newspaper. At that time he issued a statement paying tribute to the Jewish race.

In 1934, a year after Hitler came to power, Ford disclaimed any connection with an anti-Semitic volume issued by a German publishing house. It was entitled "The International Jew" and was purported to have been written by Ford.

toled reporters in indoring the administration's forthcoming armaments program.

"We can't be oblivious to the fact that the three great totalitarian militaristic Powers (Germany, Japan and Italy) already have prepared for war in advance of preparations by the so-called democracies. They are continuing the preparations far more extensively and rapidly than any preparations or proposed preparations by the so-called democratic governments."

Fittman said he believed world developments had made it "inevitable that all of our foreign relations will have to be submitted to a re-study."

Halifax Says Former Foreign Secretary Goes With 'Fulllest Approval.'

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 1.—When Lord Halifax goes to the United States to address the National Association of Manufacturers, he has the Government's "fullest approval and approbation."

Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, indicated that Eden would be an unofficial Government representative when he visited the House of Lords last night that the visit "would be extremely valuable for establishment of a same contacts Lord Runciman made."

Viscount Runciman, then President of the Board of Trade, went to the United States in 1937 to explore ground for the new British-American trade agreement.

Halifax, who became Foreign Secretary when Eden resigned in Feb. 30 in protest against the signing of the Locarno Pact, said the Government was "neglecting the United States."

"While Mr. Eden is not a member of the present time, the Government is going there with the fullest assent and approbation of the Government."

Eden is expected to report to Chamberlain on any conversation he may have with President Roosevelt.

Ronald Tree, a grandson of Lord Halifax, who has spent much of his life in the United States, will accompany Eden to New York and Washington. Tree, a member of Parliament and former editor of the Forum, has been an outspoken critic of Chamberlain's foreign policies.

He Will Assist in Valuation of American Farm Land Claims.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—Lawrence Lawson, representing United States, arrived in Mexico today to begin the evaluation of claims resulting from Mexican expropriation of farm lands belonging to American citizens.

With a Mexican representative, Gustavo Serrano, Lawson will attempt to decide the amount Mexico shall pay for the properties. More than 250 claims valued at $100,000 are on file with the American Embassy.

The commissioners expected to finish their work May 1, when Mexico is to pay $100,000, and $1,000,000 annually thereafter until the debt is satisfied.

Drew Out Savings
Last Monday Mrs. Ventimiglia withdrew $5000 in savings, and Tuesday a $1000 from the Cassa Loven. The strangers had explained wanted bills of large denominations in exchange for the Italian and the Ventimiglia's got $500 and $100 bills. Tuesday afternoon Carlo appeared at the grocery with a $500 bill, a $100 bill, a $50 bill, and a $20 bill. They displayed a colored paper, which the Ventimiglia's thought to be Italian money, and also a roll of $20 bills. Carlo spoke of Ventimiglia's, the Ventimiglia's put it in the cash register. It was agreed that it would be placed in the suit until it was needed for it. The money was given to one of the men, who then locked the door. The man departed, saying would return at 8 o'clock to complete the transaction. When they failed to return, the Ventimiglia's opened the suitcase. Filled with cash, the Ventimiglia's learned they had been swindled.

TAVERN KEEPERS RETICENT AT SLOT MACHINE HEARING

Cases of 12 in County Taken Under Advisement
by Liquor Supervisor
E. J. McMahon.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1.—Charges of violation of the State liquor control law against 12 St. Louis County holders of State liquor or beer permits, involving the alleged operation of slot machines in their places of business, were taken under advisement yesterday afternoon by State Liquor Control Supervisor E. J. McMahon, after hearings in which he was unable to obtain any definite information from the defendants as to identity of owners or distributors of the machines.

The supervisor heard 27 cases involving various alleged liquor law violations including 17 from St. Louis County and two from St. Louis. He suspended licenses of 19 dealers for periods varying from three to 10 days, took 14 cases under advisement, dismissed one, continued another for further investigation, and revoked the license of a Kansas City firm, for alleged use of illegal State liquor tax stamps.

Questioning of the St. Louis County dealers who admitted slot machines had been operated in their places brought some vague references to one "Sam," whose other name and his address could not be recalled.

"Sam" a Busy Man.
"Sam," who apparently was a busy fellow, took slot machines to liquor and beer taverns without being requested to do so, it was said usually in the absence of the proprietors, then returned in a few days, or two or three weeks, and took them away, without explanation. The dealers, so they said, had not wanted the machines and were relieved when "Sam" whisked them away.

"Sam" was described as a little fellow, perhaps 35 years old, weighing about 135 pounds, and very dark, but those questioned could recall little else about him, and denied any contacts or agreements with him for furnishing of slot machines. There also was one mention each of a "Charlie," a "Ben," and a "Frank Smith," who appeared with slot machines and later disappeared with them.

State Liquor Control Department inspectors had testified to finding slot machines in each of the 12 places, and testified they played the machines.

Transcript for County Officials.
McMahon, in taking the 12 cases involving slot machine operation under advisement, told the dealers that failure to furnish information in the hearing, about owners or distributors of the machines, would have a bearing on his final disposition of the cases, and suggested they could get in touch with him again, if they desired, before he gives his decision. It was indicated a copy of the transcript of the hearings may be forwarded to St. Louis County officials.

The 12 St. Louis County permit holders charged with operating a disorderly place, and permitting gambling, this charge in each instance involving the alleged operation of slot machines, McMahon said, and whose cases were taken under advisement, were:

Edgar May, 8540 St. Charles road; August Klesner, 4523 Easton avenue; Minnie Boenker, 1427 Ogden avenue, Wellston; William Perry, 8124 St. Charles road; Laura Hogan, 9434 St. Charles road; Mrs. A. G. Krueger, Rural Route No. 1, Overland; Fred E. Walters, 7203 St. Charles road; William E. Bice, Conway and Lindberg boulevard, Clayton; Charles Stopke, 6400 Ridge avenue; Charlie Thompson, 6367 Easton avenue, Wellston; Joseph L. Bux, 5377 Natural Bridge road; and William Halbruegge, 9404 St. Charles road.

Woman Denies Charge.
Mrs. Krueger, who holds a 5 per cent beer permit, denied charges that she had a slot machine or sold liquor, and said she opened a grocery. There was some question as to whether inspectors had given the correct address for her place, but the case was taken under advisement.

3 HUNTERS RESCUED WHEN BOAT IS UPSET

Dr. O. S. Krebs, Ladue, Tells How Fisherman Saved Him and Companions.

Dr. Otto S. Krebs of 11 Dromedary road, Ladue, and two hunting companions had a narrow escape from drowning when their motorboat overturned in the Mississippi River near the mouth of the Big Muddy River, about 80 miles south of St. Louis, Monday afternoon, it was learned today.

Dr. Krebs, who is an obstetrician, and two Cardinals men, Harry Goetz and John Koessler, had been hunting from a blind a short distance above the mouth of the Big Muddy. About 4 p. m. the three got into a motorboat to go downstream three miles to the point from which they had started in the morning.

"A squall came up," Dr. Krebs said to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "and we started to head from the center of the river to the bank. One wave washed over us and we found ourselves sitting in water. The next wave capsized the boat. Clinging to Drifting Boat.

"We were heavily laden, with hip boots and other hunting clothes. I had on two leather coats besides my hunting coat, and two boxes of shells in my pockets. Koessler and I started to swim the 75 yards to shore, but Goetz got hold of the boat, which was floating upside down, and warned us that we couldn't make it to shore. We swam back to the boat.

"The water was icy cold, but we hung on for dear life. "As we drifted, we got within 200 feet of the bank and called to a man we saw there. The current was away from the shore so we couldn't swim. The man said he had no boat and couldn't help us. We told him to get a rope or wire or anything, but he replied that he could do nothing, and just stood there.

"By that time we were chilled and had partly lost control of our arms and legs. We kept drifting, shouting for help every once in a while. When we had been in the water about 45 minutes and had drifted several miles, we saw a skiff coming from the Missouri side. In it was a fisherman named King who had seen us. He told me to grab the side of his boat, but my hands were numb and had no strength left in them.

Saved by Fisherman.
"He grabbed me by the arms and hooked my elbows over the side of his boat and left me there until he could get one of the other men in the same position on the other side, then pulled me into the boat.

"He took us to a sandbar where he built a fire, then went for a farmer who lived half a mile away.

The farmer had to go eight miles to get a telephone to call for an automobile to take us to Carbondale.

"It was an awfully harrowing experience. My two companions collapsed after we got ashore. The sad thing of it all was that as we drifted along the ducks we had shot, tied to strings, our decoys, the basket containing our lunch and a vacuum bottle all floated along beside us. We recovered the boat, but aside from that all we saved was our lives."

"He grabbed me by the arms and hooked my elbows over the side of his boat and left me there until he could get one of the other men in the same position on the other side, then pulled me into the boat.

"He took us to a sandbar where he built a fire, then went for a farmer who lived half a mile away.

The farmer had to go eight miles to get a telephone to call for an automobile to take us to Carbondale.

"It was an awfully harrowing experience. My two companions collapsed after we got ashore. The sad thing of it all was that as we drifted along the ducks we had shot, tied to strings, our decoys, the basket containing our lunch and a vacuum bottle all floated along beside us. We recovered the boat, but aside from that all we saved was our lives."

JAPANESE FINANCIAL AGENT TO U. S. TO BE APPOINTED

This is interpreted as indication of attempt to get credits or loans.

TOKYO, Dec. 1.—The Finance Ministry announced today that a financial commissioner to the United States would be appointed shortly.

Some financial circles interpreted this as an indication that Japan might attempt to obtain credits or loans in the United States.

Heretofore Japan's financial commissioner in London also has looked after Japanese financial interests in the United States.

WPA WORKER KILLED IN FIGHT WITH ANOTHER

Harry Camp Dies of Cerebral Hemorrhage; Man on Job Who Hit Him Is Held.

Harry Camp, a WPA worker employed at Jefferson Barracks, was killed yesterday afternoon in a fist fight there with a fellow employee, Sylvester Hartog, 2637 Benton street. An autopsy showed he died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Hartog, 30 years old, told Constable Ed Easley of Carondelet Township and Deputy Sheriff Jacob Pfeiffer that he was about to unload stumps, which had been repaired at a warehouse, when Camp, whom he did not know, told him not to put the stumps on the floor.

Hartog said he told Camp that he had to unload his hand truck, whereupon Camp, who was 52 years old, swung at him. Hartog said he ducked and then hit Camp several times. Camp grabbed one of the stumps, raised it over his head and then suddenly collapsed, Hartog related.

Nine other WPA workers who witnessed the fight which occurred about 1 p. m., corroborated Hartog's account, Constable Easley said. An inquest will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Hartog was booked as a suspect of manslaughter at the Sheriff's office in Clayton.

Camp lived in Baden Station, St. Louis County. His wife and three children survive.

Igoe Inducted as U. S. Judge. CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Michael L. Igoe was formally inducted yesterday as a Judge of the United States District Court where, as District Attorney, he prosecuted many important cases. Postmaster-General James A. Farley, Mayor Edward J. Kelly and eight Judges of State and Federal courts delivered messages of congratulation.

Annual national income continued unchanged since 1929, there would have been available, for the entire period, an average of $1000 more in goods and services for each man, woman and child in the United States.

Despite these depression losses, Lubin said, per capita income was higher in the United States than in any other country in the world. He put the per capita income for 1934-35 at $432, as compared with $401 in England, $345 in Germany, $322 in Sweden and $267 in France.

Analyzing the way in which the national income is distributed, Lubin said that the share going in compensation to employees had decreased from 53 billions in 1929 to 34 billions in 1933. The share going to owners of businesses, including farmers, dropped from 20 to 15 billions in the same period and the share going for dividends and interest went from 16 to 13 billions.

Standees Get Statistics. Several times Senator King interrupted the speaker as his professional pointer was poised on the peak or the valley of one of his charts. Elmer C. Mahoney suggested that Lubin be allowed to finish his presentation without interruption and members of the committee acceded to this.

The day wore on and the statistics poured forth, but the audience remained, apparently deeply interested. There were standees at the rear of the big hearing room. But whether this kind of serious, detailed economic analysis will long hold the public interest is a question, particularly since the committee has a long way to go, some members predicting that the investigation will continue at least two years.

"The modern depression is a durable goods depression," Lubin said, analyzing a chart showing how wifely the durable goods industry has declined with the depression set in, due in part at least to changes in methods of production and the use of substitute products.

The drop in the index of carloadings was almost exactly in proportion to the drop in production in heavy goods industry, Lubin said. It is a question, he added, whether freight car loading will ever come back to the previous level.

Lubin pointed out that the manufacture of shoes set a record in 1936 and 1937, the total for both years being over 400,000,000 pairs. Only about 1,000,000 pairs are imported, Lubin said in response to a question. In contrast, production of bituminous coal and lumber fell off even before the depression set in, due in part at least to changes in methods of production and the use of substitute products.

The drop in the index of carloadings was almost exactly in proportion to the drop in production in heavy goods industry, Lubin said. It is a question, he added, whether freight car loading will ever come back to the previous level.

PRESIDENT APPROVES CHOICE OF 9 TO BE REAR ADMIRALS

Also The Promotion of 79 Commanders, Including Norman Scott of Kirkwood.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—President Roosevelt approved yesterday a Navy selection board's recommendations that nine Captains be promoted to be Rear Admirals and 79 Commanders to be Captains.

Those chosen for Rear Admirals are: John Morris Smealie, Washington, chief of staff and aid, scouting force.

Robert Lee Ghormley, Washington, office of the chief of naval operations.

William Lowndes Calhoun, Long Beach, Cal., chief of staff and aid, commander battleships, battle force.

Russell Willson, San Diego, Cal., naval attaché, London.

Leigh Noyes, Washington, chief of staff and aid, commander aircraft, battle force.

William Alexander Glasford Jr., Phoenix, Ariz., commanding U. S. S. Maryland.

Arthur Leroy Bristol Jr., Charleston, S. C., commanding naval air station NOB, San Diego, Cal.

Frank Jack Fletcher, Lapalta, Md., assistant to chief of Bureau of Navigation.

Milo Frederick Draemel, Seattle, Wash., commandant, Midshipmen, Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Commanders selected for promotion to Captain, with their home addresses and present station, included:

Norman Scott, Kirkwood, Mo., now at Rio de Janeiro, as member of the naval mission to Brazil, and Herbert Whitwell Underwood of Kansas City, Mo., professor of naval science and tactics at the University of California at Los Angeles.

BARCELONA, Dec. 1.—Five insurgent planes dropped about 75 bombs on Barcelona's port district today. One person was killed.

HENDAYE, France, Dec. 1.—Spanish insurgents were reported shifting troops southward from the Ebro River front today for a new offensive on Valencia. No fighting was reported on any front.

Robert S. Wilson Gets Post. Robert S. Wilson has been appointed executive secretary of the St. Louis County Welfare Association, succeeding Howard M. Slutes, resigned. A staff member of the National Association for Travelers Aid and Transient Service for five years, Wilson has worked for the Mullanphy Fund. He received a Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1936.

ARMOUR STRIKE ENDS AT NATIONAL YARDS

CIO and Management Reach Agreement After Shutdown of Plant.

Striking employees of the Armour & Co. packing plant at the National Stockyards, who caused a shutdown of the East Side plant yesterday afternoon, returned to work this morning under an agreement reached last night between the management and the strikers, members of the United Packing House Workers' Industrial Union, a CIO affiliate.

Under the agreement the 1400 strikers withdrew their demand for a written contract which would include a closed shop and the check-off system, and the company consented to permit a membership committee of the union to make periodic canvasses in the plant and picket at the main entrance gate to collect dues. The company declined to embody the agreement in a signed contract, however.

This morning several members of the membership committee stationed themselves just outside the main gate and solicited employees going into the plant, urging non-members to join and delinquent members to pay their dues. The union, certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole collective bargaining agency, claims membership of 95 per cent of the 1400 employees.

Vernon Ford, member of the Packing House Workers' Organizing Committee, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter today that the original demands were withdrawn when he learned from union headquarters that a large number of non-members appeared during the evening to join the union and delinquents to pay back dues. He said about $600 was collected. In a statement issued yesterday while the strike was in progress, C. I. Ashley, general manager, said: "The issue is simply one of whether or not we will run a closed shop. We have refused the demands. Neither membership nor non-membership is required as a condition of employment with Armour & Co. If employees decline to work under these circumstances, we will have to regard them as having severed their employment."

The strike began at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in the hog butchering department, where 60 employees refused to continue working until several members paid delinquent dues. Shortly afterward another department refused to work for the same reason and the strike began to spread. Employees collected in groups about the plant and formulated demands for a closed shop and the check-off to eliminate delinquencies.

Striking men employees remained inside the plant until 8:30 last night, when the settlement was reached. Women were allowed to go home. At about 6:30 a truck with sandwiches and coffee, furnished by the union, pulled up outside the main gate, and the stay-in strikers marched out, ate supper and returned. Company police made no attempt to oust them.

POLICE STILL HUNT FOR TWO WHO FLED FROM SANITARIUM

Data on Charles Lane Sought at Oklahoma Penitentiary From Which He Was Paroled in 1934.

20 DETECTIVES ASSIGNED TO CASE

Descriptions of Lane and His Companion Joseph Rynkowski Broadcast—Trial Set for Monday.

With the manslaughter trial of Charles Lane and three co-defendants scheduled for the December term of court, starting next Monday, police continued their efforts today to find Lane, principal State witness, who escaped from City Sanitarium Monday night along with Joseph Rynkowski, paroled Michigan convict.

Twenty detectives were assigned to special details looking for the fugitives and police were awaiting receipt from the penitentiary at McAlester, Ok., of fingerprint and other data on Lane, who was paroled there in 1934 after serving five years of a 10-year term for armed robbery.

Pending arrival of this information police here were handicapped in the search for Lane, as he was a patient at City Hospital when arrested in October, 1937, and did not go through the regular identification department procedure. He was indicted while still in the hospital, becoming a Sheriff's prisoner, and was taken directly to city jail without being photographed at Police Headquarters. However, police have obtained a photograph from the city sanitarium, where his picture was made when he entered there for a sanity test last October.

Descriptions of the two men have been broadcast over the police radio and sent out by teletype and police bulletin. Pictures and other information have been sent to police of neighboring cities.

Trial Set for Monday. Assistant Circuit Attorney Robert T. Woodward, assigned to the case, in which Lane and his associates are scheduled to be tried for the fatal beating of a fellow steelworker in a labor quarrel, declined to say to a Post-Dispatch reporter today whether the State would seek a continuance because of Lane's absence.

Lane was the principal witness against his co-defendants, John Hurshman, Sylvester Woods and James Kuhlemeyer, whom he implicated following his arrest and identification in the killing of Raymond Coyle, a non-union employee of the Cruden-Martin Manufacturing Co.

Both Men Declared Sane. Rynkowski, also known as Jack Howard and Michael Monce, had been in the sanitarium since May, after a jury found him not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity. Sanitarium psychiatrists, however, found him sane several weeks later. His application for release on a writ of habeas corpus was to have been heard by Circuit Judge Michael J. Scott tomorrow. However, Rynkowski, if released from the sanitarium, would have been returned to Michigan as a parole violator, to serve out a 20 to 40 year term for armed robbery, of which he had served ten and a half years.

Lane had been found sane at the sanitarium Monday, several hours before he and Rynkowski threatened two attendants with an ice pick and paring knife, bound them with towels and walked out.

Lane had been sent to the institution for sanity tests by order of Judge Scott after attorneys for his co-defendants contended he was insane. His incarceration there was objected to by Dr. E. M. Grogan, superintendent, who wrote to Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller that the sanitarium had no facilities for the safe custody of prisoners. Woodward replied to Dr. Grogan that "this particular prisoner is not one from whom we have much fear of any trouble as to escaping."

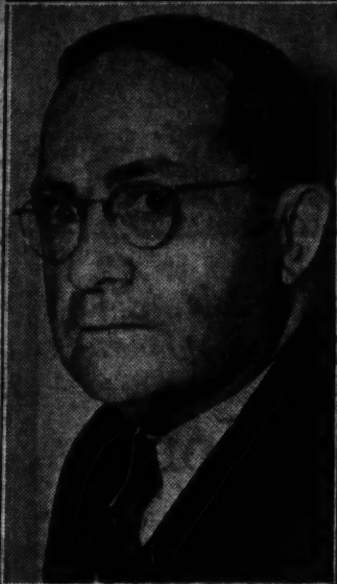

However, during a sanity test last March, Lane told Dr. Edmund F. Rassin, psychiatrist and director of the city Child Guidance Clinic, that he would escape from the sanitarium if sent there and that he knew the sanitarium had no armed guards.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Matthew Woll of the American Federation of Labor said today a number of educators, religious leaders and public officials have joined his recently formed organization for the "support and defense of democracy."

Woll said a program of work probably would be announced within a week. "Our movement will be a challenge to the destruction of freedom which we are witnessing in Germany today," he said. He listed the following as among those who have agreed to participate:

William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany; William Allen White, Emporia (Kan.) newspaper editor; William Green, president of the A. F. of L.; Grover Whalen of New York; Dr. Edward De Witt Jones, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, and Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia.

Rowe, who lives at 8744 Clements avenue, specialized in surveys to determine the organizational needs of postoffices all over the country. Although his territory embraced Missouri, Arkansas and Iowa, with headquarters here, he had frequent special field assignments because of his skill in estimating the postal requirements of various communities.

He could forecast accurately the volume of mail from a given area and the number of men required to handle it. Rarely did he come into contact with the criminal investigation phase of an inspector's Daughter of Le Mars (La.) Woman Whose Body was Buried in Garden Admits Plot to Cash Checks.

By the Associated Press. LE MAR, La., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Sumner Knox pleaded guilty last night to a charge of conspiracy in connection with the indorsement of Civil War pension checks made out to her late mother, Mrs. L. A. Trow, whose body recently was found buried in the garden of the Knox home.

District Judge R. G. Rodman sentenced Mrs. Knox to three years in the State Reformatory for Women at Rockwell City, La. The body of Mrs. Trow was found in a kitchen cabinet in a shallow grave at the Knox home. Mrs. Knox has denied any knowledge of the burial of the woman, whose death authorities have attributed to natural causes.

IRAQ'S KING AND SENATE APPROVE OIL CONCESSION

$5,000,000 Basrah Petroleum Co. Formed by British, French and U. S. Interest, Got Partial Monopoly.
By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 1. — The Iraq (Mesopotamia) Government's oil concession to the Basrah Petroleum Co., has been passed by the Iraq Senate and approved by King Ghazi. It was announced today.
The Basrah concern was formed here recently by British interests with a capital of $5,000,000. Its stockholders include French interests and the Near East Development Corporation, representing American investors.

The concession, signed last July 28, gave the company exclusive rights for 75 years to search and extract oil from Southern Iraq where there is no conflict with similar rights granted other companies.
The Basrah company must start drilling within three years and export oil within seven and one-half years, paying Iraq an annual rent of about $1,000,000 until it starts exporting oil. Then it must pay a royalty of $1 a ton of oil produced subject to a minimum of $1,000,000. Iraq is to receive free 20 per cent of all oil produced and not exported.

REFEREE IS URGED IN DISPUTES OVER TVA ACCOUNTING

Committee Member Suggests Arbitrator Between Comptroller General, Other Federal Offices.

NO BIG SHORTAGES FOUND BY AUDITORS

Accountant Says Most Discrepancies Are Due to Technicalities or Interpretation of Law.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—A suggestion that a referee be appointed to settle disputes between the Comptroller-General's office and Government departments was made today by Representative Barden of North Carolina as an outgrowth of testimony before the TVA investigating committee. Barden, a committee member, advanced the idea during questioning of Government auditors about frequent disputes with TVA over accounting and expenditures.

Stuart B. Tulloss, who has supervised TVA audits for the general accounting office, and two assistants testified late yesterday that they had found no intent to defraud the Government and no important shortages or defalcations by TVA officers or employees.

Tulloss said most of the accounting office's differences with TVA were due to technical accounting questions or interpretation of the TVA act and other Federal statutes.
TVA's Book Purchases Criticized.
At the start of today's session, Representative Wolverton (Rep.), New Jersey, criticized TVA's expenditures for "books, magazines and newspapers." He obtained from Tulloss a statement that TVA spent $10,078 on periodicals in 1934, whereas the Comptroller-General's office ruled that such expenditures were limited by law to $100.
Tulloss also testified that of $214,000,000 spent in five years by TVA, the Comptroller-General had

SPANISH REBELS RELEASE SEIZED GREEK GRAIN SHIPS

Premier Chamberlain Tells Commons of Action, Follow Franco's Admission of Error.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 1.—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today in the House of Commons the release by Spanish insurgents of two Greek ships carrying wheat owned by the British Government.

The vessels, loaded with Rumanian wheat for Great Britain, were seized Nov. 23 and 26 off Palma Bay, Mallorca, insurgent-held Mediterranean Island.
Chamberlain told the House yesterday insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco had admitted an insurgent error in taking the vessels.

"The point I was trying to make," Wolverton replied heatedly, "seemed proper in view of the broad observation made by the gentleman from Texas. I assumed the witness overlooked this important document in his reply."
Thomson asked Tulloss whether he stood on his answer in the face of Wolverton's remark.
Tulloss replied that when his organization charged fraud it must have evidence sufficient to convict.

Witness Denies Hedging.
"Aren't you hedging a little?" Thomson asked.
"I'm not hedging," Tulloss replied. "We cannot furnish evidence that will establish dishonesty."

TVA Files Brief Affirming President's Power of Removal.
By the Associated Press.
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 1. — The Tennessee Valley Authority filed a brief in United States District Court yesterday, affirming the power of President Roosevelt to oust Dr. Arthur E. Morgan from the office of director-chairman.

The brief was filed in support of TVA's motion to dismiss a suit filed by Dr. Morgan, in which he challenged the President's power of removal and asked for recognition as a TVA director with back salary since March 22.
The authority argued "the President has some power of removal beyond that expressly laid down by the act of Congress, creating TVA. This section of the act says a director may be removed by concurrent vote of the House and Senate."

The TVA based its position on two propositions:
(1) Under the Constitution the President possesses the power to remove any officer of the Government who has been appointed by him "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate" on any ground whatsoever, in the absence of an express limitation or denial of that power in the legislation creating the office.

(2) The power to remove executive officers appointed by him is conferred on the President by the Constitution and cannot be abrogated by statute.

POSSIBLE ELECTION CONTESTS
Chairman Hamilton, Confers With Iowa and Indiana Leaders.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee conferred yesterday with party leaders from Iowa and Indiana on the advisability of contesting the election victories of Democratic Senators in those states.

A party spokesman said Hamilton requested a formal outline of the proposals for seeking a vote recount before deciding whether the national committee should give financial support. Harrison Spangler, national committeeman, and Clyde Charlton, counsel to State Central Committee, spoke for Iowa. Will Irwin, Indiana National Committee man, represented his State.

Chrysler Body Men End Strike.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—A strike of 60 automobile workers that caused a day of idleness for nearly 14,000 employees of the Chrysler Corporation and the Briggs Manufacturing Co., ended yesterday afternoon when night shift workers reported for work. Officers of the United Automobile Workers' Union termed the strike "unauthorized."

the accessories to adulation

One may call them necessities (and so they are—with a history as ancient as that of time itself); but they really are the guardian angels of mankind's great and everlasting vanity. Nothing is more welcome at Christmas-time—or any other.

There are the tingling toilet waters, tangy tales, and luxury lotions for a man, for example. There are blades and a bright new razor—whether his whisker-whim is for a new safety type, or a shaver powered by the next-to-magic of electricity.

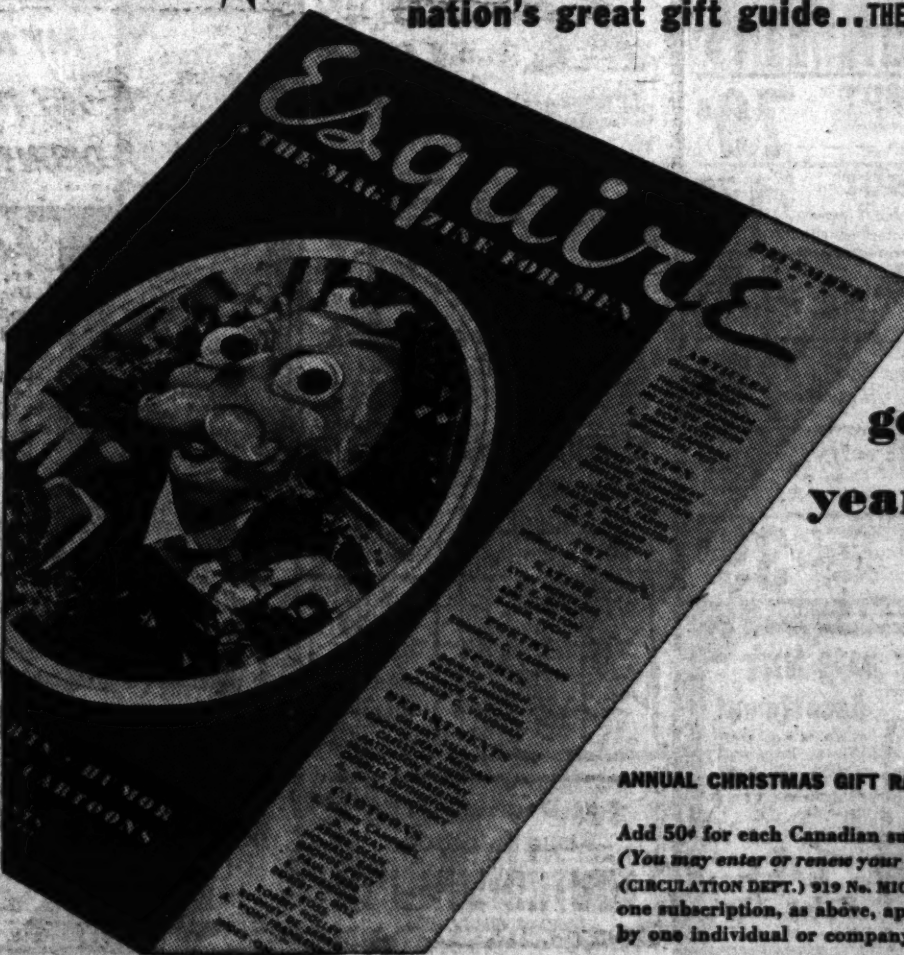

For a woman, there is infinite variety in what are, especially for her, the Accessories to Adulation. Lipsticks, compacts, nail polish and manicure sets. Exquisite toilet waters, exotic tales, heady, glamour-begetting essences.

Boxed specially in sets for both men and women, there are collections of toilet requisites that are veritable prize packages for Christmas giving.

Modern shoppers seek out such sure-fire gifts, knowing that they get next to a man's skin. And that naught is more necessary to complete the modern woman.

PLAN TO TRANSFER JEWISH CHILDREN TO ENGLISH HOMES

Committee of British Jews
Now in Berlin Proposes Gradual Shift of 5000 of Race.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Dec. 1.—A committee of British Jews now in Berlin, today disclosed plans to take some 5000 Jewish children less than 17 years old, to England in the near future. The committee hopes to find English homes for these young exiles from Germany, where restrictions on their people are being tightened steadily.

The plans call for the emigration of children of Jewish parents now professing the Christian faith, as well as those holding the Jewish faith. The 5000 children could be absorbed only gradually, it was said, but the committee plans to call for English volunteers to take them into their homes.

It was learned also that one school which trains Jewish boys for farming and handicrafts in Palestine will soon be transferred to Great Britain. Teachers at this school hoped they also might be transferred, but this, according to British sources, is more difficult than the transfer of the students, since it involves the question of British labor permits.

Reliable informants in Vienna indicated that 1100 young Jews recently obtained visas for emigration to Liberia, where they hoped to establish new homes.

Rise in Jewish Suicides.
A wave of Jewish suicides was reported by responsible persons today to have spread throughout Germany as the Nazis decreed new anti-Jewish measures. Rabbis worked overtime conducting ceremonies. They and other authoritative sources were forbidden to disclose how many killed themselves or died suddenly from causes attributed directly to anti-Jewish actions.

Police in all parts of Germany were empowered by a new order to forbid Jews to appear in certain districts or leave home at certain times.

Official hindrances to Jewish emigration continued. A new decisive measure required Jews to get special identification cards before Jan. 1. These will serve to distinguish them from the rest of the population and must carry as first names the prescribed Israel for males and Sarah for females.

"Jewish Curfew."
The official gazette printed the "Jewish curfew" measure under the heading, "Police order regarding the appearance of Jews in public." The regulation declared "the proper provincial police departments" may forbid German Jews or Jews without nationality to appear in certain districts or to leave their homes at definite times. Violations may be punished by fines up to 150 marks ($60) or imprisonment up to six weeks. It was explained the order provided a "legal basis" for a decree forbidding Jews to appear on the streets during eight hours on the day of national solidarity Dec.
3, when Nazi leaders collect for the winter relief fund.

The sudden deaths of both men and women fall into two classifications:
1. Those who could not stand the unaccustomed rigors of concentration camps and either died while still imprisoned or soon after their release, from the effects. Jewish sources estimated up to 60,000 Jews have been taken to concentration camps.

2. Men and women who died after heart attacks resulting from grief over the fate of relatives and friends or from strain and excitement caused by repeated searches by police and the destruction of their property.

Emigrants Held Up.
Applicants for passports who have German securities with which they have been trying to pay their share of the $400,000,000 levy against Jews so they could emigrate soon are being told by banks they may not sell their securities except by special permit.

It is explained that the Finance Ministry wants Jews to give up their gold, jewelry and art objects first.

Financial sources thought the reason for this regulation was that gold and jewelry can be converted readily into needed foreign exchange whereas German securities might find a less ready market.

Legislature adjourned last night.
The last measure passed was a bill prohibiting telephone and telegraph companies from knowingly furnishing wires for the dissemination of information for gambling.

It gives the Public Utility Commission power to reject any contracts for wire leases and provides fines and imprisonment for those permitting use of them for gambling. Two companion measures aimed at news networks for horse race bookmakers were killed.

The special legislative session was called in July, primarily to bolster the Democratic administration's efforts to halt a grand jury investigation of charges of "conspiracy to defraud" made against high officials in the spring primary campaign. Laws passed to allow the Legislature to supersede the court in the inquiry were declared unconstitutional.

JAPANESE BOMBERS KILL 72 AT KWEILIN

Many Buildings Destroyed in Kwangsi Province; Incendiary Explosives Used.

By the Associated Press.
KWEILIN, Kwangsi Province, China, Nov. 30 (delayed).—Japanese war planes bombed this South China city of 150,000 with incendiary and other bombs today killing 72, wounding more than 300 and destroying many buildings.

Destructive fires were caused in the Governor's mansion, the principal shopping street and a dozen residential districts.

Many inhabitants fled when air-raid sirens sounded an alarm nearly an hour before the raiders appeared. All American residents escaped, police said.

From a perch on a rocky hillside overlooking the city the Associated Japanese planes methodically bomb Kweilin from only 2000 feet in spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire. A few Chinese planes flew off without trying to give battle. None of the raiders was shot down.

Incendiary bombs threw up huge columns of smoke. The bombing was extremely accurate, scoring direct hits on provincial Government buildings.

An ammunition dump north of the city exploded and shook the neighborhood like an earthquake.

Bombs fell within 300 yards of the Southern Baptist Mission Hospital, shattering all its windows. Fire

HOW VOCATIONAL TRAINING HELPS IN FINDING JOBS

Dr. Arthur K. Getman Reports to Convention on Results of Survey at Williamsport, Pa.

A research report showing the effectiveness of public school vocational training was before the American Vocational Association today as sessions of its thirty-second annual national convention continued at Hotel Jefferson.

About 1500 administrators and teachers of vocational training were registered today and more were expected before the close of the convention Saturday. Registration figures did not include visitors or exhibitors.

In an address at the first general session of delegates last night, Dr. Arthur K. Getman, New York State Supervisor of Agricultural Education and former president of the association, disclosed the results of a study of 976 graduates of courses in home economics, industrial and agricultural training at Williamsport, Pa., a city of 45,000.

Purposes of Training.
"We found that the aims of vocational education—to equip young persons with skill, technical knowledge and management ability that will make their services profitable to an employer and assure their success in economic life—were largely realized in the 20-year experience in this field at Williamsport," he said.

"A very large proportion of the graduates are now working in the fields for which they were trained," he continued. "The training helped them get jobs and progress in their work at a faster rate than those who were not trained. Nearly all told our investigators they were satisfied with the kind of education they had received and would repeat the courses if they had the chance to choose again."

The study, which was conducted by the American Vocational Association with funds provided by the Carnegie Corporation, showed that methods in general use in vocational education are satisfactory, Dr. Getman concluded. He spoke on the program in the place of Aubrey Williams of Washington, Assistant WPA Administrator, who was unable to come to St. Louis.

A new policy of the United States Office of Education, to provide funds for occupational information, individual counseling, expanded opportunities for training, and assistance in the problem of placement, Dean Chapman, who was formerly Missouri State Director of Agricultural Vocational Education, declared.

"We are now chiefly concerned with efficiency which can be expressed in terms of placement and progress in the occupations for which our trainees are prepared. Unless we begin with selected groups these objectives cannot be realized. We need guidance to the end that only those persons enter vocational classes who may reasonably be expected to profit from it."

Suggestions as to Promotion.
Laurence Parker, State Supervisor of Trade and Industrial Education for Kansas, suggested in a talk today that administrators of evening classes take a cue from the operators of correspondence schools in the matter of promotion.

"They really know how to describe in such a way that it makes a man in the overall save up his money and spend it in good-sized installments."

FOX — "Angels With Dirty Faces" starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with the Dead End Kids and Humphrey Bogart, at 12:15, 1:15, 4:15, 7:15 and 9:45; "Adventure in Sahara" with Paul Kelly and Lorna Gray, at 10:15, 12:15, 3:15, 6:15 and 8:45.
MISSOURI — "If I Were King" starring Ronald Colman with Basil Rathbone and Frances Dee, at 12:30, 3:30, 6:30 and 9:30; "Savannah" with Tom Brown and Constance Moore, at 2:25, 5:25 and 8:30.
ST. LOUIS — "Little Lord Fauntleroy" starring Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello, at 12:15, 3:15, 6:15 and 9:15; "The Sign of the Cross" with Tom Brown and Constance Moore, at 2:25, 5:25 and 8:30.

ments," he said. "When we take the same amount of time and effort to describe completely the short courses we have to offer, then we will much more easily promote a good evening school program."

Public school industrial training should include analysis of such Federal legislation as the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act and the various phases of the Social Security program, Dr. George E. Myers, professor of vocational education in the University of Michigan, asserted in an address yesterday.

"Industrial training is much more than training in skills and related technical knowledge," he said. "Agricultural education is fast becoming education for a way of life and not merely for making two blades of grass grow where one grew before. The same must be true of industrial training to a far greater extent than at present."

Dr. Myers spoke of the future of industry and the effect of probable changes in the life of the industrial worker. "Technological unemployment has been more acute during the present decade than ever before and seems sure to continue acute for years ahead," he said. "We are faced as a consequence with the problem of retraining adult workers for new occupations to be determined by new inventions and the breaking up of old occupations into new specialties."

The second general session of the convention was to be held this afternoon. Delegates will attend the annual dinner and dance this evening.

CONSERVATIVES' CANDIDATE WINS BRITISH BY-ELECTION

Party Keeps Parliament Seat of Late Lord Stanley, But at Slightly Reduced Majority.
LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Conservatives kept the Parliamentary seat of the late Lord Stanley in the Hyde division of Lancashire today by winning a by-election with a majority slightly reduced from that of the previous election.

The vote: Capt. C. G. Lancaster, Conservative, 23,281; Dr. Mabel Tylecote, Labor, 17,648. The majority was 20,615, compared to the previous majority of 23,352. Capt. Lancaster was a close friend of Lord Stanley, Secretary for Dominions who died Oct. 18.

The pre-election campaign was fought largely on the issue of Prime Minister Chamberlain's international policies.

In 57 by-elections since the November, 1935, general election, the Government has lost 10 seats to Labor and three to Independents.

Pension for Chicago Red Cap.
CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Robert A. Irvine, 65 years old, thought to be the first Red Cap in the United States to retire on a pension, was honored last night at a dinner in the La Salle street station. Ending 45 years of service, Irvine and his wife will move soon from suburban Oak Park to Miami, Fla.

THE NEW MOVIES IN ST. LOUIS FOR THIS WEEK

"SUBMARINE PATROL" AT FOX TOMORROW

Continued Programs Indicated At Three Theaters—Revival At St. Louis.

With holdover programs at most of the first-run theaters, interest centers in the new feature which heads the Fox program tomorrow. "Submarine Patrol," detailing the activities of Uncle Sam's famous "splinter fleet" of submarine chasers in the World War, is one of the major releases of the season.

The original source of the story was Ray Millholland's book, "The Splinter Fleet." Brian James, Darryl F. Zanuck, John Ford, "Intense" fame, directed.

Richard Greene, young English actor, and Nancy Kelly, newcomer from Broadway, have leading roles in a cast which features George Bancroft, John Carradine, Douglas Fowley, Joan Valerie, Henry Armetta and J. Farrell MacDonald.

As the aristocratic young Perry Townsend III, Greene joins the sub-chasing service, meets and falls in love with Miss Kelly, daughter of George Bancroft, skipper of a submarine ship. The sub-chaser to which Greene is assigned is sent to help convoy Bancroft's munitions ship to Italy. In the course of the voyage, Greene is able to win Bancroft's favor.

Greene, who made his first Hollywood appearance in "Four Men and a Prayer," recently was seen opposite Sonja Henie in "My Lucky Star." Miss Kelly has a long movie record, since she made 52 silent pictures in the East as a child, but has not appeared in talking pictures previously. She had made a name for herself on Broadway in "Sun and God" with Gertrude Lawrence, when she received her latest screen test.

The submarine chasers of World War glory were wooden patrol boats, 110 feet long and designed for speed rather than seaworthiness. As a consequence, life aboard was, by general agreement, a "concentrated hardship." The sub-chasers carried one three-inch gun, two machine guns and depth bombs. Credit for putting them into action in double-quick time went to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In "Submarine Patrol" most of the navigation took place in a studio tank, except for scenes involving views of the freighter and its convoy.

The Fox's second picture, "A Man to Remember," has been catalogued already by the movie industry as one of the "surprise" films of the year. The story of a country doctor, it features Edward Ellis with Lee Bowman and Anne Shirley. The narrative opens with three creditors of Dr. John Abbott looking through his private papers, at the same time his funeral is about to begin. The various receipts, notes and such reveal the physician's worth to the community and convince the creditors that he owes them nothing.

"Adventure in Sahara" is the story of a mutiny in the French Foreign Legion.

The present popularity of Mickey Rooney also is responsible for the revival of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the St. Louis Theater, beginning today. The feature, released early in 1938, has Rooney in an important supporting role. Freddie Bartholomew plays the boy of the title, Dolores Costello his mother and C. Aubrey Smith his severe grandfather.

The second feature at the St. Louis, "Shipshooters," features Brian Donlevy and Wally Vernon as a pair of naval cameramen in a mythical kingdom, Lynn Bari as governess of the young Prince of the kingdom. The film is intended to be the first of a series about the adventures of cameramen. The Western picture for Saturday's and Sunday's matinee at the St. Louis will be "Galloping Romeo," with Bob Steele.

"Brother Rat" at the Fox last week and "Just Around the Corner" from the week before that, make up the new continued program going into the Missouri tomorrow. "Brother Rat" is a comedy of cadet life at Virginia Military Institute and "Just Around the Corner" a musical starring Shirley Temple.

No new features are announced for the Ambassador, which would indicate continuance of some of the current features there.

New Laughton Feature. Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 1. — Paramount Pictures will distribute the Charles Laughton starring picture "The Beachcomber," throughout the western hemisphere. "The Beachcomber" is based on a W. Somerset Maugham story and scored throughout the British Empire in its recent pre-release under the title "Vessel of Wrath." The picture was produced and directed by Erich Pommer and in addition to its star, Charles Laughton, features Elsa Lanchester in the leading feminine role with Robert Newton and Tyrone Guthrie.

WESTERN STATES GET MOST FILM NOTICE

Texas and Arizona in First and Second Place, With Kentucky Third.

By the Associated Press. HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 1. — The most interesting states in the Union, from a movie-maker's standpoint, are rootin' tootin' Texas and Arizona.

Kentucky, land of the blue grass, runs a good third. Shut out, more or less, are Pennsylvania, Michigan, Massachusetts, Illinois, Ohio, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Kansas.

Bob Burns, the drawing comic who's been busy this season in "The Arkansas Traveler" and "I'm From Missouri," completed a survey today showing that states of the wild West are mentioned most often in movie titles.

"I wouldn't want to hurt anybody's feelings by suggesting that his home state lacks box-office appeal," Burns said, "but there's a mighty lot of states that have never had pictures named after them."

Texas and Arizona shine oftenest on theater marquees, the comedian's research indicated, because of the steady output of cowboy thrillers.

When one of Hollywood's bright minds christens a movie "The Fighting Texans" or "In Old Arizona," he's fairly certain it will attract the attention of fans who dote on hard-riding, straight-shooting heroes.

Because Kentucky suggests horse racing and horse racing suggests melodrama of the photo-finish sort, the blue grass state leads all others in Dixie as movie title material.

George Raft started one the other day called "The Lady's From Kentucky." Loretta Young's "Kentucky" is ready for preview.

Other states have crashed the studios in such productions as "Okla-homa Kid," "Oregon Trail," "Saint in New York," "Mississippi," "The Virginian," "A Man From New Mexico," "A Man From Utah," "Hills of Old Wyoming," "The Connecticut Yankee," "Old Louisiana," "Nevada Buckaroo," "Idaho Red," "Oregon Trail," "Carolina," "Under Montana Skies," and "California Straight Ahead."

"I don't think it's up to me to revolutionize the business of naming pictures," Burns concluded, "but I wonder what would happen if they tried experimenting with titles like 'In Old Kansas,' or 'A Man From Michigan,' or maybe 'The Fighting Illini!'"

SHIRLEY TEMPLE PROTECTED AGAINST CONFLICTING COLOR

Bright Yellow Manned From 'The Little Princess' So the Star Can Be Noticed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 1. — There's a new "heavy" in pictures these days. No big, bad bogeyman, nor horror killer in this villain, but just an ordinary color-yellow.

In fact the usually inoffensive canary shade is such a villain in the scheme of things that at Twentieth Century-Fox they've hired one man, whose sole job is Shirley Temple's new picture, "The Little Princess."

In one of the opening scenes of the color film, Shirley is required to visit the stables behind Miss Minchin's school. Before the scene could be shot, every bit of straw used to bed the horses in the stable had to be dyed—a dull shade of green.

"If we left the straw a natural yellow," explained Chief Cameraman Artie Miller, "Shirley would be hardly noticed when the scene was flashed on the screen."

So sensitive is the human eye to yellow that one yellow shirt in a crowd of extras would be sufficient to attract the audience's attention from the stars at the focus of interest.

EXTRADITION TO OHIO

OF E. J. MERKLE REFUSED

Gov. Stark Rules Contractor Acquiesced by Sister-in-Law, Committee No Criminal Offense.

When request of Gov. Martin L. Dewey of Ohio for the extradition of Edward J. Merkle, charged in an indictment returned in Springfield, Ill., with false pretenses in obtaining $10,000 from two sisters of his first wife, was refused by Gov.

Lloyd C. Stark, after a hearing at Jefferson City Tuesday.

The indictment charged that Merkle, a contractor, borrowed $10,000 from his sister-in-law, giving as security property in Kansas City which proved to be mortgaged and not worth what he said it was. Gov. Stark, in his decision, held that the transaction was not a criminal offense.

Merkle had been at liberty since his arrest Oct. 18 under $50,000 bond on which he was discharged after his appearance at the extradition hearing. He resides at 728 Northmoor drive, University City.

U. S. JUDGE CITES OPEN FAIRNESS OF THREE SPIES' TRIAL

John C. Knox Points Example to Countries Which Secretly Prosecute and Summarily Execute.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—United States District Judge John C. Knox regards the Nazi spy trial in his court as an example of fair judicial procedure for certain other countries where, he says, foreign spies are secretly tried and summarily executed. He discussed the case in an interview yesterday.

Johanna Hofmann, 26 years old, a German ship's hairdresser; Otto Hermann Voss, 39, airplane mechanic; and Erich Glaser, 28, former United States army private, were convicted of conspiring to steal American military secrets, the latter with a recommendation for clemency.

They will be sentenced tomorrow afternoon under a law providing a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

Miss Hofmann and Voss were convicted Tuesday and the jury yesterday resumed consideration of Glaser's case. Spending most of yesterday rehearsing testimony concerning him and returning its verdict late in the day.

Judge Praises Jury.

After Glaser's conviction the judge praised the Government's prosecution staff for having had "the courage to divulge what it had learned."

He said the trial "should teach persons coming here that they must understand that to engage in espionage is dangerous work and that such persons shall be punished."

Judge Knox also praised the jury. He said in an interview he had "leaned over backward" in charging the jury because he wanted other nations to know that America provides a "fair, honest and humane trial" for all, regardless of nationality or of the offense charged.

"In some countries," Judge Knox said, "spies are given a secret trial and shot immediately. A few months later an announcement is made of their death and that is all we hear about it."

Judge's Charge to Jury.

The judge, a native of Waynesburg, Pa., where he served as Justice of the Peace at the age of 22, spoke 79 minutes in charging the jury.

He directed the jury to disregard the nationality of the three defendants (all Germans or German-born), declaring they should receive "consideration equal to that of an American citizen."

Then he launched into a summation of the Government's chief witness, Guenther Gustave Rummel, United States army deserter and defendant, who turned informer.

"Examine his testimony with the utmost discrimination," Judge Knox directed the jury.

Foreign newspaper correspondents hastily scribbled cable messages.

Then he said frankly that in his opinion Rummel was an "unmitigated liar" in a number of instances.

"But," he said, "even a liar, as each of us knows, can on occasion speak truth."

Judge Knox said after the trial that it was his personal conviction the defendants were part of the German espionage system and that this country was too lax in investigating spy activities.

Thanks Spies Attended Trial.

He said he was convinced some of the daily spectators at the trial were spies for foreign countries.

"I believe I could point them out," he said. "They took notes and watched everything that went on in the courtroom."

"However, I want the world to know the American way of doing things. Our courts are open, our justice is the best we know how to give."

"I am glad that the Government prosecuted this case so that the people of this country might have an appreciation of what is going on within the borders of this country, which is supposed to be at peace with the rest of the world."

AUSTRALIA TO ADMIT 15,000 REFUGEES IN THREE YEARS

Government Announces Preference Will Be Given to Those Able to Establish Industries.

By the Associated Press.

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 1.—The Australian Government will admit 15,000 European refugees within the next three years, Minister of the Interior John McEwen told the House of Representatives today.

Co-operating with Great Britain in the effort to alleviate the plight of German Jews, Australia will give preference to those able to establish new industries.

It was held that 15,000 was the maximum number Australia could absorb without disturbing economic conditions.

Opposition leaders commended the principle and said the quota was reasonable.

A bill compelling registration of all aliens was introduced in the Senate.

CONCEALED WEAPON CHARGE AGAINST J. G. OEHLEH

Dismissed by County Magistrate for "Lack of Criminal Intent."

Following Hearing.

A charge of carrying a concealed weapon against John G. Oehler, part owner of the Millstream Club, a resort at Crystal Lake Park, on Eppa road, in St. Louis County, was dismissed by Justice of the Peace Louis Hicks at Clayton yesterday for "lack of criminal intent," following a hearing.

"Ladies police, who arrested Oehler Sept. 23, testified he had a small pistol in a vest pocket. He said he carried the weapon for protection, as he frequently carried large amounts of money and because of acts of vandalism at his club."

Residents of the village of Crystal Lake Park had reported Oehler was armed. The village trustees were seeking an injunction to close the club on the ground liquor laws were violated and disturbances occurred at the place.

U. S. BATTLESHIP CONTRACT AWARDED; PRICE $52,794,000

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Navy Department awarded today a contract for construction of a 35,000-ton battleship to the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J., at a price of $52,794,000.

The price represents a reduction of $2,000,000 from the company's bid.

Contracts for the building of three battleships were awarded Nov. 18. At that time the Navy said it would hold up the award for the fourth vessel pending further study of the bid price which it considered too high.

GERMANY ACKNOWLEDGES NOTE OF U. S. ON JEWS' TREATMENT

Berlin Foreign Office Announces It Has Sent Communication to American Embassy.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Foreign Office said today it had sent the United States Embassy a note "in the nature of an acknowledgment" of the Washington note concerning the treatment of American Jews in Germany.

The United States asked Nov. 21 for formal assurances that the decree ousting Jews from business enterprises in the sweeping Nazi anti-Jewish campaign would not apply to Jews holding American citizenship.

U. S. JUDGE CITES OPEN FAIRNESS OF THREE SPIES' TRIAL

John C. Knox Points Example to Countries Which Secretly Prosecute and Summarily Execute.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Norma Shearer might have quit motion pictures after the death of her husband, Irving Thalberg, in 1936—she was rumored at the time—except for payments totaling nearly $1,000,000, an attorney for Loew's, Inc. disclosed yesterday.

The lawyer, former Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, said Loew's paid more than $800,000 from its net earnings to Thalberg's estate to prevent Miss Shearer from exercising an option which would have allowed her to retire.

He reported the payments in his opening statement defending Loew's against a $300,000 accounting suit by six minority stockholders of the corporation, being tried by Supreme Court Justice Louis A. Valentine without a jury.

When Thalberg died, Proskauer said, many rumors circulated through Hollywood, among them that Loew's was trying "to do Miss Shearer in." To bolster morale in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, the lawyer said, it was agreed that the Thalberg estate should receive 4 per cent of the net profits until Dec. 31, 1938.

When Thalberg died, said Proskauer, $350,000 already had been spent on the movie "Marie Antoinette," in which Miss Shearer was the star.

Emil K. Ellis, attorney for the plaintiffs, charged that between 1927 and 1938 more than $15,000,000 or 20 per cent of net profits was paid in salaries and bonuses to Thalberg, Louis B. Mayer and J. Robert Rubin.

Contracts with them, he alleged, were arranged at executive meetings of which stockholders and directors knew nothing. He also charged Loew's with wasting $3,000,000 in acquiring a minority interest in Gaumont-British pictures.

Farley's Book Out Today, Story of a Politician's Life

Postmaster General's Autobiography, in Which He Hints of Retirement From Politics,
Also Is History of New Deal.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—James A. Farley, the latest member of the Roosevelt administration to write a book, tells the story of his career as a political manager which, on the face of the record, has been one of the most successful this country ever saw.

Published today, his book is called "Behind the Ballots: The Personal History of a Politician." In it the Postmaster-General and Democratic National Chairman presents at once an autobiography and a biography of the New Deal.

He concludes with the implication that possibly he may have reached as high as he will go—with the observation "the wise man steps down when he is at the top and before the going gets rough"—and with the almost simultaneous confession that "a resolution to swear off politics" probably wouldn't last very long.

Farley begins with his birth at Grassy Point, N. Y., tells how he developed his now-famous habit of letter writing, and expresses his personal devotion to President Roosevelt.

His Cabinet Post.
He tells of his pride when his appointment as Postmaster-General was disclosed by the President and how he and the President's chief secretary, had cautiously talked over their prospects before the first inauguration.

"We were both sparring around a little, of course," Farley writes, "hoping that the other would open up first. The truth is that if F. D. had gone to Washington without me I would have died, and the same was true of Louis."

Again, after describing, in the fastest-moving section of the book, the great struggle at the 1932 Democratic convention and how it won, he tells of Roosevelt's arrival at the airport in Chicago to accept the nomination.

"Somehow," he writes, "I managed to get alongside. F. D. was on the lookout. He grasped my hand cordially, and exclaimed 'Good work, Jim.'"

His Letter-Writing Habit.

In another passage, he describes in detail how he manages to sign so many thousands of letters.

"I have been asked," he says, "if my hand gets cramped or tired. On occasion it does, but not often. When that happens I hold it under the cold water for a few moments, then flex the fingers back and forth, repeating each process until the circulation returns and the hand is normal again."

Proudly a politician of the old-fashioned organization type, Farley deals little in social philosophy, but remarks in one sentence that he thinks the outstanding lesson of the age is that government must be more "humane."

Farley's Two-Party System.

He defends the two-party system and its accompanying political patronage; speaks more highly of Secretary of State Hull and Vice-President Garner than leaders of most other members of the President's administration, and says the "brain trusters never exercised as much influence in shaping Roosevelt's policies as the public imagined, and certainly not as much as they thought themselves."

Saying he wanted to "set at rest" reports of "political quarrels with the President," he vows that he never left Roosevelt's presence in anything except the happiest frame of mind.

Some attacks made on him, he says, have hurt more than he ever acknowledged, and politics has been a hard and little-paying business, but he winds up: "Public life has been very good to me. The young man who got his start pulling doorbells and hauling voters to the polls at Grassy Point has come a long way—to be candid, much farther than he ever expected. It could only happen here. America is a great country."

HOTEL SETTLES FOR $2000 CLAIM OF FORMER CLERK

Ernest G. Rankin Had Sued for $60,000 Damages, Alleging False Prosecution.

A settlement of $2000 was agreed on yesterday in Circuit Judge William S. Connor's Court in the suit of Ernest G. Rankin, 7042 Tholozan avenue, former clerk of the Chase Hotel, against the hotel of officials and certain employees, for false prosecution.

Rankin was arrested June 5, 1937, on complaint of the hotel management to the police, who were investigating the disappearance of $600 in receipts from the hotel safe or from the custody of an auditor, who had removed the money from the safe.

His petition alleged that police and hotel employees searched his house, damaging the furniture, and he was held for three weeks by police, after the hotel management charged him with the misappropriation of $20 from other funds in his possession having nothing to do with the $600 fund. The management did not prosecute the charge against him on the smaller amount, his attorney, Walter Hayes, said, and "there never was any proof he took the $600."

The suit, which was for $60,000 damages, named as defendants The Chase Hotel Co., former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, as receiver; Sam Koplar, manager, and William Burlew, house detective, and two other employees.

NEW YORK CITY WINS FIGHT TO RAZE 6TH AVE. ELEVATED

Judge Signs Order to Permit Institution of Demolition Proceedings.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Manhattan's Sixth avenue elevated line, which has been operating since 1878, is doomed to demolition. The last legal obstacle facing the city in its long fight to demolish the structure was removed yesterday when State Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin signed an order permitting the city to institute condemnation proceedings.

The Manhattan Railway Co., owner of the line, opposed the order. City officials said, however, that the city for removal would be asked for Monday.

Contracts for the demolition prohibit sale of the steel to European or Asiatic governments for use in armaments and munitions.

The second oldest elevated in the city, it will be replaced along Sixth avenue by a new subway now being built by the city.

PROSECUTION NEAR END

IN MAIL SCHOOL TRIAL

Government Expected to Close Case Today Against De Montreville and Others.

The Government is expected to complete its case today against Clarence de Montreville, promoter of the Public Service Institute, a correspondence school, and 11 associates, charged with using the mails to further a scheme to defraud.

James G. Yaden, chief of the investigation division of the United States Civil Service Commission, on the stand today for the third day, was asked on cross-examination by George C. Dyer, defense attorney, whether notices of civil service examinations were mailed to schools which offered courses in preparation for Government employment.

"No," replied Yaden. When Dyer asked why, Yaden replied: "We don't believe in those schools. That is not a personal opinion but an official position on the matter."

Yaden said in his opinion the courses offered by the Public Service Institute were of little value and whatever value they had was diminished greatly by carelessness in the grading of papers. Spelling, geography, history and civics were stressed in the courses, but played little part in civil service examinations, he added.

He said students were told they would have to quote verbatim the preamble to the Constitution and parts of the Declaration of Independence, but actually were not asked either of these things on civil service tests. "Valuable material in the courses was so buried in a mass of irrelevant material as to be of little value," he declared.

He said one question in a course offered by the school was "What famous university is in Princeton, Pa.?" He said he had never been able to find one there.

Examination of Yaden disclosed that De Montreville had worked in the United States Railway Administration in 1917, starting at $1800 a year and working up to a $3000-a-year job in two years. He was not under Civil Service. Later he told a Post-Dispatch reporter he started as a court reporter, later became a statistician-economist and finally was executive secretary of the Board of Adjustment, Division of Labor, in the Railway Administration. He said he quit to become a statistician-economist for the telegraphers' union in St. Louis.

Yaden testified yesterday that a person who passed a civil service examination was not assured of appointment to a job. Previous testimony had been given that salaried men of the school told prospective students they would certainly get Government jobs if they received passing grades on civil service examinations.

The present policy of the civil service was to make jobs available in non-technical fields to as many persons as possible by reducing educational requirements and basing examinations entirely on ability, Yaden continued. For example, he said, stenographers received tests in typing and taking dictation and were not required to have an extensive general education.

The Government has sought to show that the school's enrollment blanks offering preparation for jobs in the field service mean that the school was offering to prepare applicants for jobs which actually require extensive schooling and experience. The defense, on the other hand, maintains that the school offered only preparation for non-technical jobs which required little education or experience.

NEW JURY IN KRUEGER CASE

It Will Pass on Sanity of Man Convicted in Shooting.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Superior Judge Frank M. Smith discharged today the jury that convicted Charles E. McDonald of assault with a deadly weapon for shooting Mrs. Emma Krueger and ordered a new jury impaneled to hear McDonald's plea of innocent by reason of insanity. Judge Smith made no explanation of his action. Court attaches said it was customary for the same jury that hears a case to pass on insanity pleas.

McDonald faces a term of one to 10 years in prison if the new jury finds that he was sane on Aug. 19, when he shot Mrs. Krueger, wife of the Kansas City Symphony Orchestra leader. McDonald, whose defense was based on a contention that he was "unconscious" when the shooting occurred, blamed Mrs. Krueger for an estrangement between himself and his wife, a governess in the Krueger home.

"A.L. OWNERS MUST AGREE TO CHANGE"—FRICK

Feller Is Fined $100 for Speeding by Des Moines Judge — Sotheron Sells Milwaukee Stock.

Monty Stratton Is Out of Danger, Doctors Announce

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 1. — RAW-BONED, six and a half foot, Monty Stratton, a fellow who literally dragged from a Texas cornfield to major league baseball fame, has struck out at 25.

One leg, the powerful right leg he dug into the pitcher's box, is gone. His off-season hobby, hunting, cost him his career. A pistol dangling in a scabbard at his hip discharged last Sunday as Monty trudged along looking for rabbits.

The bullet clipped an artery and physicians amputated his leg 48 hours later. Hospital attendants said today Stratton was improving and apparently was out of danger.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Although pessimistic of his chances, President Ford of the National League, who came here as a banquet speaker last night, hopes to curb the general practice of recalling players on a player claimed by another club.

"It may be too much to expect," Frick said, "but I certainly like to see a rule go into effect that would prevent a club from asking for a player on a player claimed by another club."

Frick's stand was upheld by President Bob Quinn of the Boston Sox, who suggested that the league be increased to $100,000. The latter pointed out that major league clubs now have the right to call for players on every one of their players and then recall them, even if seven other clubs put in claims.

Quinn has suggested that the major league players' limit be increased from 25 to 28, was told by Frick that it would be adopted by the league.

"I have received assurances from four other clubs that they favor such a move," Frick said. "That is enough to insure a National League recommendation. I don't know what the American League thinks about jacking up the limit, but if it does not agree with us, the question will be referred to Commissioner Landis for final decision."

Feller Is Fined $100. — DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 1. — Bob Feller of Van Meter, Ia., youth pitcher star of the Cleveland Indians, was fined $100 and recommended that his driver's license be suspended for 90 days was made by Municipal Judge Charles C. Cooter yesterday. Feller was found guilty of reckless driving.

The customary fine in such a case is $75 if the defendant pleads guilty.

A packed courtroom heard State Highway Patrolmen N. B. Wilson and C. E. Woods testify Feller drove at 45 miles an hour going through Ankeny, Ia., a small town near here, and en route to Des Moines the night of Nov. 14.

The crowd also heard five witnesses, including Feller, testify that he sped through Ankeny at "between 40 and 50" and that "he slowed down to 30 miles an hour at the railroad crossing in the north part of Ankeny."

The patrolmen arrested Feller, they said, on the outskirts of Des Moines.

Feller, his father and three Des Moines men were returning from a hunting trip at the time.

Recommendation that the driver's license be suspended goes to the State Motor Vehicle Department and is generally approved.

Sotheron Sells Stock. — MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 1. — Henry J. Bendering, president of the Milwaukee Brewer baseball club, announced yesterday the club has purchased Allan Sotheron's stock holdings and settled its other obligations to the deceased manager.

Sotheron was dismissed several weeks ago, despite the fact his contract called for a $6000 annual salary, had three years to run. His stock in the club was reported valued at $30,000.

Terms of the settlement were not announced.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—Gerry August, president of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, left last night for New Braunfels, Tex., to inspect the new spring training camp site of the Phillies. He said he would meet Manager Doc Prothro there on Friday.

Glants Withdraw Support. — BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., Dec. 1.—The Blytheville baseball club of the Northeast Arkansas League announced yesterday that the New York Giants had withdrawn their sponsorship of the club.

Who Is Best Heavy? Why? Am, Says Two-Ton Galento

Declares He'll Finish Otis Thomas in Round or Two in Bout Here Next Week.

By W. J. McGoogan

Who is the greatest heavyweight boxer in the world today? Tony Galento of Orange, N. J., was asked that question early this morning. Looking earnestly into a glass of beer, he answered, in all seriousness:

"I am."

Tony is here to finish training for his 12-round bout with Otis Thomas at the Arena next Wednesday night. And most everything he says must be taken with a grain of salt. Still he talks as though he believes it himself.

"Otis Thomas? He's a good stiff puncher," said Tony, "but I'll stop him in a round or two. Max Baer? One round he may last with me. Joe Louis? Say, I'll knock that bum out."

So you wouldn't say that Galento was lacking in confidence. He exudes confidence.

Stepping off the train from Orange, N. J., yesterday, his first query was:

"St. Louis? Where's the band? I thought they'd be playing the St. Louis Blues long before now."

There was no band to meet Tony, but Prosecuting Attorney Jimmy Finnegan was there, so were a number of other local folks. And Tony loved it.

He wanted just one drink. It wasn't long before he repaired to his downtown hotel and after a walk in the fresh air he went to the Business Men's Gymnasium for a short workout.

He pushed the light bag and the heavy bag, didn't do any boxing because there were no sparring partners handy, then he started out to see the town.

His manager, Joe Jacobs, missed him walking up Pine street and Tony was discovered hiding in a tavern.

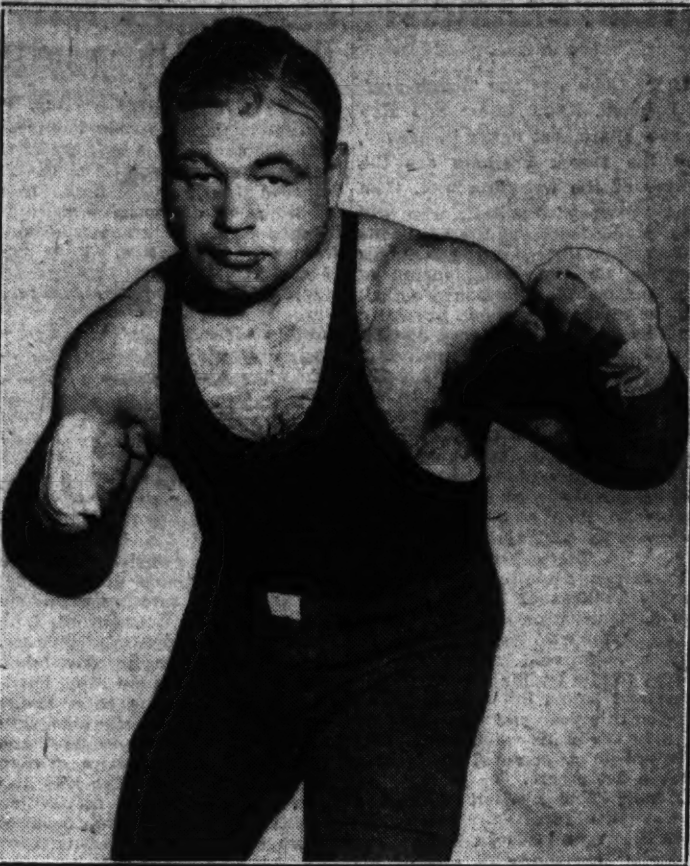

"I just wanted one glass of beer," he yelled to Jacobs, who was adamant and insisted that he go back to his hotel without his drink.

"You gotta meet Finnegan for dinner," declared Joe, "and you'd better do no drinking."

Tony argued but was finally prevailed upon and he met Jim Finnegan for dinner at the Missouri Athletic Association.

"Say, that's a swell joint," Tony said later, "why they've got a swimming pool, handball court, Turkish baths and what have you."

Tony wouldn't stay put very long and after dinner he went to a night club for his first night in town, where he took a bow, drank a little beer and went to his hotel under the admonishment of his trainer, Jimmy Frain, that he would have to be up early in the morning to do his roadwork in Forest Park.

He's 28 Years of Age. Galento is 28 years of age. He's married and has a son, seven months old.

It was a difficult task getting him out here a week in advance of his fight with Thomas, according to Joe Jacobs, who said:

"You can't get him away from that kid," and Joe went on to say that Tony asserted he would do just as well getting out here the day before the fight.

Galento has his own ideas of training and he has been getting along with them for more than 10 years.

"Sure, I drink a little beer," he declared, "and I do just what I want in training."

His trainer, Frain, shrugged his shoulders and remarked:

"I don't care what he does, it gets results and that's what we're after."

Tony doesn't take his training too flippantly, that's apparent from his condition. He has a round face and his waist line is not that of a finely drawn athlete, but his efforts have, borne results, as is shown by the number of good men he has defeated.

Galento has lost, too. He has been stopped twice by cut eyes, by Marty Gallagher and Al Gainer. He shows the marks of those battles, too.

Started as Middleweight. Tony started in the amateur ranks as a middleweight, but he defeated so many fighters in his own class, to say nothing of light heavyweights and heavyweights that he was asked to turn professional which he did some 10 years ago.

He declares he has never been knocked down nor out in the professional ranks.

Tony is going to continue his routine here. He'll work out in the gymnasium each afternoon, after his morning jaunt and he won't forgo his beer. Still he expects to be in prime condition for Thomas, whom he does not hold lightly.

Another Brownie prospect, not on the reserve list, is young infielder Berardino, who is considered so good that Scout Ray Cahill recently said the Browns didn't need a Joe Gordon from the Yankees.

Scouts, owners, officials and fans expect much from Berardino and his San Antonio running mate, Sig Grysk. Much is expected, too, from Joe Glenn, the catcher from the Yankees, and Myril Hoag, outfielder from the same club, who should bolster the Browns' secondary defense considerably.

Much Help Is Needed. There is room for improvement in all departments of the Browns, and the club seems to be making a determined effort this year to give the customers a better show. The young players may not deliver up to expectations, but that is the only way to improve—to keep on buying and developing and trying youngsters.

Last year the Browns were a bad ball club. Outfielders missed line drives which were scored as clean hits, but which should have been batted down. Fielding averages meant nothing. Any outfield and infield has to keep on trying until three outs are registered in each inning and so even the chances copied don't mean too much, as the figures do not show the number of drives that went past infield and outfield for clean hits.

Branch Rickey, if we remember correctly, paid Francis a compliment during an October fanning bet. Said in effect that he was good enough to be the best catcher on the list, but even that doesn't mean too much.

Many of the names may be erased from the list before March 1, by transfer to minor league clubs, and of course the fans hope that there will be trades to put experienced men at some of the important positions. But as it stands, the list isn't one to start any hurried plans for October padding.

Browns of 1939. Fred Haney's Browns of 1939, from the Judge's list, will include the following:

FLYERS PROTEST TULSA VICTORY IN LEAGUE PLAY

Ed C. Steffen, president of the St. Louis Flyers, in a wire to William F. Grant, president of the American Hockey Association, yesterday filed a notice of protest of the Flyers' game with the Tulsa Oilers, played at Tulsa Tuesday night, on the grounds that the contest was not handled by an official American Hockey Association referee.

Tulsa won, 2-0.

In the minutes of the American Hockey Association Board of Governors meeting early this season, it was agreed that the referee assigned to the game, failed to appear, that a referee's committee composed of George Lackey of Tulsa, Ed Steffen of the Flyers and Marlin Cox of Wichita. Assignments were to be made a month in advance and all clubs were to receive copies of the assignments.

The game at Tulsa Tuesday night was held for almost 40 minutes, but when Stan Swain and Dave Davidson, referees assigned to the game, failed to appear, that a referee's committee composed of George Lackey of Tulsa, Ed Steffen of the Flyers and Marlin Cox of Wichita. Assignments were to be made a month in advance and all clubs were to receive copies of the assignments.

After a meeting of the board of directors of the Flyers last night at the Arena, Steffen said that the Flyers did not intend to force the issue, but filed the protest as a precautionary measure. No definite stand will be taken until a decision of the board is reached.

Manager MacKinnon and his players are in Kansas City today for a battle with the Greyhounds tonight. It is likely that MacKinnon will confer with President Grant in regard to the protest. Following the game tonight, the Flyers return to St. Louis for a match with Kansas City at the Arena Sunday night.

Millers Trim Skyhawks. By the Associated Press. MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1. — The Minneapolis Millers in a hotly contested American Hockey Association game last night defeated the Wichita Skyhawks by a 4-2 score.

The Skyhawks garnered their only goals of the game in the first 10 minutes of play when Miller scored on an assist from Slim in 1:30 and Muirhead took a pass from the center in 8:06.

Minneapolis scored their first counter while Maloney, Wichita wing, was in the penalty box. Smith took a pass from Mitchell and Farrant in 12:53. Hanson evened the contest on a pass from McDonald in 14:47.

Farrant put the Millers in the lead by counting in 12:46 on a pass from Mitchell and Hanson. The final counter came late in the third period when Farrant passed to Godin who pushed the puck by Goalie Goodman at 18:31.

FENCING SEASON GETS UNDER WAY TONIGHT. A prep foil meet at Webster Groves High School tonight will be the opening meet of the St. Louis division of the Amateur Fencers' League of America for the 1938-39 season. A total of 17 tournaments will be held during the year.

Twelve clubs, including five new members, are in the league. In addition, the Imperial Fencers' Club, which disbanded in 1936, has been reorganized with Robert Witte, Mrs. Muriel Witte and Edwin Euler on the squad.

The new members are the Carondelet Y. M. C. A., with Witte, former city saber champion, in charge; the Y. W. C. A., coached by Ervilia Droll; Harris Teachers College, under Dr. Theodore Leon; Downtown Y. M. C. A. under George Berchek and Webster Groves, under Tracy Barnes, league president.

The old members are the Fencers' Club, St. Louis Fencing Team, Webster Groves High School, Washington U. and Salle d'Armes Vical.

The tournament schedule: Dec. 12—Novice foil team, at Webster Groves High. Dec. 12—Novice open, at South Side "Y." Jan. 12—Novice foil, at Webster Groves High. Jan. 12—Novice saber, at South Side "Y."

BUDGE TO MAKE HIS PRO TENNIS DEBUT, JAN. 3

By the Associated Press. MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 1. — Ellsworth Vines, back on domestic soil after a barnstorming tennis tour of Caribbean countries with Fred Perry, says the United States has a good chance to keep the Davis Cup another year.

The fact that Don Budge has turned professional "won't hurt too much," Vines said when he arrived with Perry on the Cuban Clipper last night.

"I figure it will be just about a toss-up between the United States and Australia next year," Vines said. Genda, New York, Perry and Vines planned to leave by train for New York today.

ST. PHILIP NERI IN SOCCER FINAL. St. Philip Neri, Penrose Park group champion, reached the final of the Northern Division by defeating Corpus Christi, Riverview Park winner from Jennings, yesterday afternoon at Penrose Park, 1 to 0, in the opening round of the Parochial Schools soccer league championship elimination series.

St. Philip Neri will meet the winner of the White Squadron match between the White Squadron of Sherman Park and St. Teresa of Fairgrounds. Those teams played to a scoreless tie at Sherman Park.

In another match, St. Ambrose of Forest Park defeated St. Agatha of Cherokee Park, 2 to 0, at Forest Park.

"A. L. OWNERS MUST AGREE TO CHANGE"—FRICK

Feller Is Fined $100 for Speeding by Des Moines Judge — Sotheron Sells Milwaukee Stock.

Monty Stratton Is Out of Danger, Doctors Announce

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 1. — R. W. B. Stratton, a half-foot pitcher, is out of danger, doctors here today announced. Stratton, who was injured in a fight with a major league pitcher, is now in the hospital. The doctors said that Stratton's condition was improving and that he would be able to return to the field in a few days.

BOSTON, Dec. 1. — Although pessimistic of his chances, President Ford Frick of the National League, who came here as a banquet speaker last night, hopes to curb the general practice of recalling players on a player's claim by another club.

"It may be too much to expect," Frick said, "but I certainly like to see a rule go into effect that would prevent a club from asking a player to be recalled and then recalling him when he is claimed by another club."

Frick's stand was upheld by President Bob Quinn of the Boston Red Sox, who suggested that the waiver price be increased to $10,000. The latter point was the one on which the Red Sox and the National League clubs now have the right to call for waivers on every one of their players and then recall them, even if seven other clubs put in claims.

Quinn, who has suggested that the major league players' limit be increased from 23 to 25, was told by Frick that it would be adopted by the league.

"I have received assurances from four other clubs that they favor such a move," Frick said. "That is enough to insure a National League recommendation. I don't know what the American League thinks about jacking up the limit but it is not agreed with us, the question will be referred to Commissioner Landis for final decision."

Feller Is Fined $100. DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 1. — Bob Feller of Van Meter, Ia., youth pitcher, was fined $100 and recommended that his driver's license be suspended for 90 days by Municipal Judge Charles A. Cooter yesterday. Feller was found guilty of reckless driving.

The customary fine in such a case is $75 if the defendant pleads guilty. A packed courtroom heard State Highway Patrolman N. B. Wilson and C. E. Woods testify. Feller drove as high as 87 miles an hour going through Ankeny, Ia., a small town here, and on route to Des Moines the night of Nov. 14.

The crowd also heard five witnesses, including Feller, testify that his speed through Ankeny was "between 40 and 50" and that "he slowed down to 30 miles an hour at the railroad crossing in the south part of Ankeny."

The patrolman arrested Feller, they said, on the outskirts of Des Moines. Feller, his father and three Des Moines men were returning from a hunting trip at the time.

Recommendation that the driver's license be suspended goes to the State Motor Vehicle Department and is generally approved.

Sotheron Sells Stock. MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 1. — Henry J. Bendinger, president of the Milwaukee Brewers baseball club of the American Association, announced yesterday the club had purchased Allan Sotheron's stock holdings and settled its other obligations to the departed manager.

Sotheron was dismissed several weeks ago, despite the fact his contract, calling for a $6000 annual salary, had three years to run. His stock in the club was reported valued at $30,000.

Terms of the settlement were not announced.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1. — Gerry Nugent, president of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, left last night for New Braunfels, Tex., to inspect the new spring training camp site of the Phillies. He said he would meet Manager De Prothro there on Friday.

Who Is Best Heavy? Why? Am, Says Two-Ton Galento

By W. J. McGoogan

Who is the greatest heavyweight boxer in the world today? Tony Galento of Orange, N. J., was asked that question early this morning. Looking earnestly into a glass of beer, he answered, in all seriousness: "I am."

Tony is here to finish training for his 12-round bout with Otis Thomas at the Arena next Wednesday night. And most everything he says must be taken with a grain of salt. Still he talks as though he believes it himself.

"Otis Thomas? He's a good stiff puncher," said Tony, "but I'll stop him in a round or two. Max Baer? One round he may last with me. Joe Louis? Say, I'll knock that bum out."

So you wouldn't say that Galento was lacking in confidence. He exudes confidence. Stepping off the train from Orange, N. J., yesterday, his first query was: "St. Louis? Where's the band? I thought they'd be playing the St. Louis Blues long before now."

There was no band to meet Tony, but Prosecuting Attorney Jimmy Finnegan was there, so were a number of other local folks. And Tony loved it.

He Wanted Just One Drink. Tony wasn't long before he repaired to his downtown hotel and after a walk in the fresh air he went to the Business Men's Gymnasium for a short workout.

He punched the light bag and the heavy bag, didn't do any boxing because there were no sparring partners handy, then he started out to see the town.

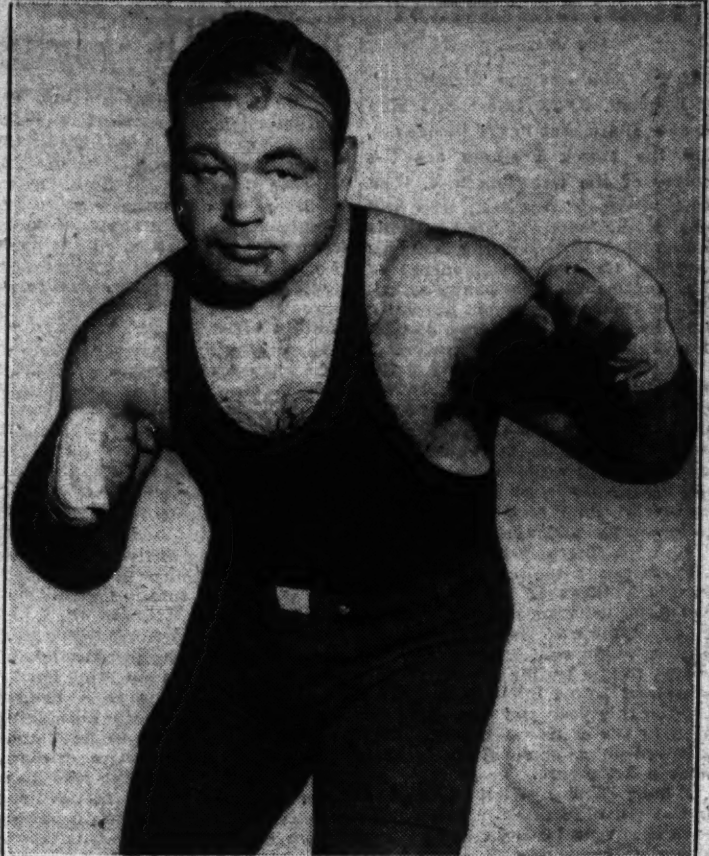

His manager, Joe Jacobs, missed him walking up Pine street and Tony was discovered hiding in a tavern.

"I just wanted one glass of beer," he yelled to Jacobs, who was adamant and insisted that he go back to his hotel without his drink. "You gotta meet Finnegan for dinner," declared Joe, "and you'd better do so."

Tony argued but was finally prevailed upon and he met Jimmy Finnegan for dinner at the Missouri Athletic Association.

"Say, that's a swell joint," Tony said later, "and we've got a swimming pool, handball court, Turkish baths and what have you."

Tony wouldn't stay put very long and after dinner he went to a night club for his evening's entertainment, where he took a bow, drank a little beer and went to his hotel under the admonishment of his trainer, Jimmy Frain, that he would have to be up early in the morning to do his roadwork in Forest Park.

He's 28 Years of Age. Galento is 28 years of age. He's married and has a son, seven months old.

It was a difficult task getting him out here a week in advance of his fight with Thomas, according to Joe Jacobs, who said: "You can't get him away from that kid," and Joe went on to say that Tony asserted he would do just as well getting out here the day before the fight.

Galento has his own ideas of training and he has been getting along with them for more than 10 years.

"Sure, I drink a little beer," he declared, "and I do just what I want in training."

His trainer, Frain, shrugged his shoulders and remarked: "I don't care what he does, it gets results and that's what we're after."

Tony doesn't take his training too flippantly, that's apparent from his condition. He has a round face and his waist line is not that of a finely drawn athlete, but his efforts have borne results, as is shown by the number of good men he has defeated.

Galento has lost, too. He has been stopped twice by cut eyes, by Marty Gallagher and Al Gainer. He shows the marks of those battles, too.

Started as Middleweight. Tony started in the amateur ranks as a middleweight, but he defeated so many fighters in his own class, to say nothing of light heavyweights and heavyweights that he was asked to turn professional which he did some 10 years ago.

He declares he has never been knocked down nor out in the professional ranks.

Tony is going to continue his routine here. He'll work out in the gymnasium each afternoon, after his morning jaunt and he won't forgo his beer. Still he expects to be in prime condition for Thomas, whom he does not hold lightly.

Larry Atkins, matchmaker of the show, which is under his promotion and that of Tom Pecks, said today that he had added two more preliminary bouts, between Jack Conway and Bud Wilson and Bob Amster and Emanuel Murray over the four-round route.

Galento recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia under the care of Dr. Joseph O. Higl, a team shown by the number of good men he has defeated. Dr. Higl expects to fly out here for the fight.

FLYERS PROTEST TULSA VICTORY IN LEAGUE PLAY

Ed C. Steffen, president of the St. Louis Flyers, in a wire to William F. Grant, president of the American Hockey Association, yesterday filed a notice of protest of the Flyers' game with the Tulsa Oilers, played at Tulsa Tuesday night, on the grounds that the contest was not handled by an official American Hockey Association referee.

Tulsa won, 2-0. In the minutes of the American Hockey Association Board of Governors' meeting early this season, it was agreed that the referee assignment would be handled by a referee committee composed of George Lackey of Tulsa, Ed Steffen of the Flyers and Marlin Cox of Wichita. Assignments were to be made a month in advance and all clubs were to receive copies of the assignments.

The game at Tulsa Tuesday night was held up for almost 40 minutes, but when Stan Swain and Dave Davidson, referees assigned to the game, failed to appear, Pete Mitchell, former St. Louis player and a spectator at the game, was called to officiate.

After a meeting of the board of directors of the Flyers last night at the Arena, Steffen said that the Flyers did not intend to force the issue, but filed the protest as a precautionary measure. No definite stand will be taken until a detailed account of the game is received from Manager Johnny MacKinnon.

MacKinnon should MacKinnon report that the game was handled in an orderly manner, the club will immediately withdraw the protest, Steffen said.

Manager MacKinnon and his players are in Kansas City today for a battle with the Greyhounds tonight. It is likely that MacKinnon will confer with President Grant in regard to the protest. Following the game tonight, the Flyers return to St. Louis for a match with Kansas City at the Arena Sunday night.

Miller Trim Skyhawks. By the Associated Press. MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1. — The Minneapolis Millers in a hotly contested American Hockey Association game last night defeated the Wichita Skyhawks by a 4-to-2 score.

The Skyhawks garnered their only goal in the first 10 minutes of play when Miller scored on an assist from Slim in 1:30 and Mulvihill put a pass from Miller counting in 8:05.

Minneapolis scored their first goal while Mulvihill, Wichita wing, was in the penalty box. Smith took a pass from Mitchell and Farrant in 12:53. Hanson evened the count on a pass from McDonald in 18:47.

Farrant put the Millers in the lead by counting in 12:46 on a pass from Mitchell and Hanson. The final corner came late in the third period when Farrant passed to G. G. G. who pushed the puck by Goalie Goodman at 18:31.

FENCING SEASON GETS UNDER WAY TONIGHT

A prep foil meet at Webster Groves High School tonight will be the opening meet of the St. Louis division of the Amateur Fencers' League of America for the 1938-39 season. A total of 17 tournaments will be held during the year.

Twelve clubs, including five new members, are in the league. In addition, the Imperial Fencers' Club, which disbanded in 1936, has been reorganized with Robert White, Mrs. Muriel Witte and Edwin Euler on the squad.

The new members are the Carondelet Y. M. C. A. with Witte, former city saber champion, in charge; St. W. C. A. coached by Erville Droll; Harris Teachers College, under Dr. Theodore Leon; Downtown Y. M. C. A. under George Serchek and Webster Groves, under Tracy Barnes, league president.

The old members are the Fencers' Club, St. Louis Fencing Club, Webster Groves High School, Washington U. and Salle d'Armes Vical.

The tournament schedule: Dec. 1—Novice foil team, at Webster Groves High. Dec. 2—Novice saber team, at Webster Groves High. Dec. 3—Novice epee team, at Webster Groves High.

comparison of hitting and pitching statistics of the senior and junior leagues almost futile. It makes it necessary to allocate the use of different baseball world series games.

You might carry the uniform ball idea still farther and use a standard ball for the minors and majors—and 35 leagues more. As it now stands, the larger minors use the White ball which is said to be much better than the one used in the American League last year.

Having a different baseball for the minors makes it almost impossible to properly value the services of minor league hitters. The boys with the big home run and batting figures in the AA and classifications usually fall away considerably when they come up to the majors.

The layout of the diamond is uniform, naturally — why not opt a nationally standardized baseball?

Why Not? ed. Why NOT? s suggestions, last year following Disap's holdout, have come up again for consideration and may be adopted at the joint meeting of the majors.

Jake's first idea was a 12-inches contract for baseball players, making the player subject to orders at all times and suspensions for not showing up at training camp.

A player who remained away from training camp two weeks while talking over terms would lose two weeks' pay. If he received $12,000 a year that would mean the loss of $500 salary, not to mention possible fines.

It was also suggested in this connection that, instead of the around salary contract, the player's pay begin with the spring training period so as to help the owner swing his players into line for the squad west South.

The plan would at least insure proper conditions for the player. One of the great drawbacks to holdouts, to the risk to owner's way of thinking, is training time lost by the holdout and the consequent loss of an efficiency.

The owner certainly is entitled to some protection against the other absurd holdouts made by the stars.

At Full Strength. A recent bulletin issued by Commissioner Landis' office presents the reserve lists of the major league clubs and shows that Ray Blades is manager of a squad of 40 players, while Fred Haney's roster includes 38 athletes.

Unless trades are arranged—and both clubs say they will strive to strengthen—the fate of the two teams in 1939 will depend on the players named in the Judge's bulletin. And so perhaps a study of the rosters might be of some interest.

The Cardinals at their Florida training camp will present few players who will be brand new to observers. Here's the list: Pitchers—Bowman, Cooper, Davis, Paul Dean, Harrell, Henshaw, Johnson, Krist, Lanier, McGee, Macon, Sherer, Sherrill, Shoun, Sunkel, Warneke and Weiland.

Catchers—Bremer, Franks, Naron, Owen and Padgett. Infielders—Brown, Crisp, Cutler, Stu Martin, Mize, Myers, Orango, Outlaw and Sturdy. Outfielders—Epps, Hopp, King, Pepper, Martin, Medwick, Moore, Slaughter and Vesilich.

With the exception of Robert Bowman, Al Sherer and Lee Sherrill, all the pitchers on the list have been seen in action at Cardinal camps or in Redbird uniform.

Herman L. Franks will be the only new catcher at St. Petersburgh; Joe Orango the only infielder not previously inspected, and the outfield squad includes no newcomers.

Branch Rickey, if we remember correctly, paid Franks a compliment during an October faning bee. Said in effect that he was good enough to be the best catcher on the list, but even that doesn't mean too much.

Many of the names may be erased from the list before March 1, by transfer to minor league clubs, and of course the fans hope that there will be trades to put experienced men at some of the important positions. But as it stands, the list isn't one to start any hurried plans for October padding.

JOCKEY GILBERT'S LICENSE IS REVOKED BY MARYLAND BODY

STAR RIDER IS SUSPENDED IN "RINGER" CASE

Sweet, a Groom, Ruled Off Turf—Three Others Previously Punished in Same Investigation.

By the Associated Press.
BALTIMORE, Dec. 1.—The Maryland Racing Commission revoked the jockey license of Johnny Gilbert yesterday and ruled John Sweet, a groom, off the turf at the conclusion of its investigation into the Bye Bye Will "ringer" case.

Others previously banned from Maryland tracks by the commission in the same investigation include: Thomas Malone, trainer of the race horse Ullino, which the commission alleged had been run as Bye Bye Will at Pimlico last May 7; M. R. Schwartz, owner of Bye Bye Will, and Jimmy King, the trainer.

The commission announced it would not consider an application for reinstatement from Jockey Gilbert until May 1. The commission announced the ban was made permanent because of a conviction several years ago on Federal narcotic charges.

Gilbert was drawn into the controversy when he first told the commission he had not ridden Ullino in a workout at Belmont Park, May 7. Last Saturday, however, he testified that he had exercised Ullino at the New York track, May 7, and added that "anybody could be wrong."

The jockey booted in 34 winners on Maryland tracks during the year. He tied for second place with Al Shellhamer. Jockey Lucas Dupps, with 53 winners, won first place.

Photos Will Be Used.
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A method of identifying race horses by means of photographs which, it is hoped, will end "ringing" or substituting one horse for another, will go into effect in 1939, according to the New York Times.

It is expected that within two years all 10,000 thoroughbred race horses in the country will be included in a gallery of photos which will be used to identify horses wherever they run. It has been definitely decided to inaugurate the plan at the Hialeah Park meeting which will start at Miami, Jan. 11.

If successful there, Joseph E. Widener, who in addition to owning Hialeah is president of Belmont Park here, and vice-president of the Jockey Club, will bring the plan to New York.

Other major tracks throughout the country are expected to follow suit if the plan is accepted in New York.

ALLHOFFS TAKE LEAD IN CLASSIC LEAGUE

The Allhoffs today own undisputed possession of first place in the Wednesday night division of the Classic League, following their sweep of the match with the Silver Seals last night at the Florio alleys.

The Budweisers, previously tied with the Allhoffs, slipped and dropped two to the Wileks. In the third match, the Say It With Flowers team, rolling a three-game third game of 317, took the first and third game from the Hermanns and had a 217 score.

Charles O'Donnell of the Allhoffs grabbed off individual honors for the night with a 672 score, including the high single game, 279.

The results:

Team	1	2	3	Total
Allhoffs	—	1051	922	2773
Silver Seals	—	884	971	2855
Wileks	—	987	975	2047
Budweisers	—	918	990	2010
Say It With Flowers	—	981	1070	2151
Hermanns	—	943	1115	2058

BUSIEKS TRIM ROGERS IN MAJOR CITY RACE

By sweeping their match with the Rogers team, the Busieks increased their lead last night in the Major City League bowling race.

Other sweeps went to the Robbards, who rolled a three game total of 2350 to defeat the Folschamps and to the Schumachers who won from the Thompsons.

Although the Carters had the high single game, 1014, they lost by a 2-1 count to the Falschamps. By the same count, the Hesselbergs defeated the Lamberts and the Brim-meyers won from the Camels.

THREE ACES OF TENNESSEE ON ALL-STAR TEAM

By the Associated Press.
ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 1.—Eight Southeastern Conference teams, headed by Tennessee's high-flying Volunteers, placed representatives on the 1938 all-star team of the Associated Press.

Coaches and sports writers joined in selecting the 11 players for the honor roll, voting positions to three Tennessee players and unanimous nominating the Volunteer captain, Bowden Wyatt, for an end berth—the lone candidate receiving a full bundle of ballots.

Joining Wyatt on the all-star line-up were his teammates, Quarterback George Cafego and Guard Robert Surridge.

Louisiana State University placed two players on the team, with other positions going to Georgia Tech, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Tulane.

One Sophomore Honored.
Surridge was the only sophomore to crash the honor roll. Two juniors were accorded places—Cafego and Ken Kavanaugh, Louisiana State star named at the other end position.

Voting for the center position left little to spare among a trio of outstanding players—Quinton Lumpkin of Georgia, Jack Chivington of Georgia Tech and Sherman Hinkle of Kentucky, each the captain of his team. Lumpkin polled slightly the most votes, with Chivington just ahead of Hinkle.

Standout play of Cafego, Mississippi's ace, Parker (Bullet) Hall, Tulane's Warren (Bronco) Brunner and Alabama's Charlie Holm, gave this quartet of ball carriers, kickers, passers and defensive stars a decided edge over other eligibles.

There was one repeater from the 1937 team—Big Eddie Gatto of Louisiana State. For the tackle berth, Tennessee's (Bo) Russell, Auburn's captain, held a decided advantage over the field. Maurice Holdgraf, Vanderbilt sophomore, and Ray Miller of Tulane gave Gatto a close race.

Well Up in Front.
Milton Howell of Auburn and J. W. Gorse, Louisiana State, more, pressed Brooks in the votes for the second guard position. Carey Cox of Alabama and Bernie Smith of Tulane received many votes for the center post.

Other backs running well up in the selections were Bert Marshall and Roy Huggins of Vanderbilt; Babe Wood and Len Coffman of Tennessee; Spec Kelley of Auburn; Vic Bradford of Alabama; Jim Fordham of Georgia; Dave Zoeller of Kentucky and Kimble Bradley of Mississippi.

.... NOW "READY-TO-GO" IN RED CROWN!

Saves Gasoline in Start-Up and Warm-Up and gives you maximum Winter mileage!

YOUR ENGINE STARTS up with the quickness of a finger-snap with Standard Red Crown... Your motor warms up so rapidly you save gasoline and get maximum Winter mileage.

This convenience—and economy—result directly from the extraordinary facilities of Standard Oil. During the Summer millions of gallons of "light", highly volatile fractions of gasoline are imprisoned in refrigerated tanks. As Fall deepens into Winter they are blended and stabilized in increasing amounts in Standard Red Crown. Released with the first "kick" of your starter, those volatile fractions get your car under way speedily on the coldest days. Try this gasoline just once and you'll use it constantly from that time on.

WITH TRADE WAR ON DANUBECommons Is Told Nazis Use Unfair Tactics in Southeastern Europe—Subsidies Likely
In Plan to "Put on the Screws."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Britain is mobilizing its huge industrial machine to keep Germany from strangling the markets of southeastern Europe —Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and others.Heavy subsidy of British industries to permit strong competition with the dictator states was considered likely in financial circles.The trade war was outlined to the House of Commons last night by R.
S. Hudson, secretary of the overseas trade department, who declared that the countries of Central and Southeastern Europe "continually are turning to us and asking us to help them out."Hudson warned Germany to cease what he considered unfair tactics threatening world trade or risk having Britain beat it at its "own game."He charged Germany was buying above world prices and selling its goods at less than cost of production. He said that Germany once this year bought southeastern wheat at about $3.50 a ton when Manitoba No. 1 wheat was selling on the London market at about $3.45.ITALIAN CONSCRIPTION
WOULD INCLUDE LIBYAMilitary Service Plan Approved With Clamor Being Raised to Acquire Tunisia.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 1.—Italy is preparing measures to permit military conscription, in an emergency, among the natives of African Libya.
The Fascist grand council last night approved a plan for compulsory military service "in time of need" under a proposed statute of "special citizenship" for natives of the four coastal provinces of Libya.They would be permitted to hold colonial civil posts, belong to the Fascist party's Moslem division, and carry arms under the military conscription regulations if they could read and write Italian and meet other requirements.The conscription would increase Italian armed forces in North Africa, as a time when clamor is being raised in Italy for acquisition of French Tunisia, which lies alongside Libya.There are 688,000 Arab and Berber natives in the four Libyan provinces affected, but how many would be liable to military service was not estimated.Native units in Libya, which had recruited voluntarily, totaled about 26,500 men.Compulsory service would enable Italy to increase native levies, presumably making fewer reinforcements from the mainland necessary in time of war.Italy reinforced the Libyan garrison during the Ethiopian war to an estimated strength of 40,000
Italian troops. The permanent Italian forces there were fixed at 21,- 000 officers and men.After the Ethiopian campaign two army corps were created in Libya
—the 20th and the 21st, which Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano yesterday disclosed had been brought up to war strength during the September crisis. The 20th corps has been estimated at 42,000 men. Whether the 21st was enlarged was not disclosed.These troops figured in the British-Italian friendship negotiations last spring, Italy agreeing to reduce the number to an unspecified peacetime strength. How many were called home to Italy never was disclosed.While Britain desired agreement with Germany, he said, Britain would not hesitate if necessary to "put on the screws."Hudson said he already had succeeded in organizing industry to meet the German methods.Hudson's disclosures caused some surprise, because Premier Chamberlain recently had declared there was plenty of trade for both Germany and Britain in the Danubian basin.Another surprise was a statement in the House of Lords by the Marquess of Londonderry, in the past friendly toward Germany. He denounced German anti-Jewish actions as "the most detestable of the world ever, has known," and continued:"When we are faced with a policy of truculence and threats, if we cannot overcome it by the policy we have tried to follow—of peace based on friendship—we should adopt another policy, one of truculence and vehement protestation against any threats."ICELAND MARKS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Dec. 1.— Iceland, the only country in the world without a single soldier, warship or fighting plane, rejoiced today in 20 years of sovereignty, peace and prosperity.The anniversary of the state's sovereignty was observed by student processions to the grave of Statesman Jon Sigurdsson and speeches by government officials.
Including a broadcast by Prime Minister Hermann Jonsson to the 27,000 Icelanders in America.On Dec. 1, 1918, King Christian X of Denmark confirmed an Ice-landish-Danish law which made Iceland again a sovereign state.
Since then Iceland and Denmark have operated as separate nations, with King Christian representing the supreme executive power in each.Iceland is proud of these things:
It has the oldest parliament in the world—the Althing—founded in 930 A. D.It was from Iceland, according to some authorities, that America was discovered.Iceland has a language unchanged for 1000 years and every adult in the country can read and write.Iceland has the greatest per capdustry agreements. The industrialist, who headed President Roose-

Says After Legislative Conference With Speaker
Bankhead.

By the Associated Press.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Dec. 1.—
President Roosevelt said after a conference on the legislative program today he would deliver his message to the new Congress in person.Talking with reporters after an hour and a half with Speaker Bankhead, he said they discussed the whole range of prospective legislation and everything was smooth.He declined to answer questions whether the Government reorganization bill, defeated in the last session, would be revived, preferring not to go into detail about specific proposals taken up with the Speaker.Asked to enumerate the "must" bills to be recommended in the order of their importance, the President said there was no such thing as a "must" bill any more than there was last year, and the year before. He termed the "must" business as chimeric.Comment on Opening Message.
Asked whether he would send his opening message Jan. 3 or deliver it in person, the President smiled and said he would make it in person if the Speaker would let him.Sitting beside him in his automobile in front of Georgia Hall, administration building of the Warm Springs Foundation, Speaker Bankhead said he would have everything
"all set" for a presidential personal appearance, that is, "if I am elected Speaker."When the Speaker was asked for a report on the conference, after the President had finished talking, he replied:"Oh, we talked of many things—cabbages and kings, etc."He had announced just prior to the meeting that he would cover the "whole business," indicating the three vacancies on the House Rules Committee would be discussed.

CAROL EMERGES
AS 'STRONG MAN' IN IRON GUARD PURGERumania Apparently Relieved by Killing of Cod-reanu and 13 of His Nazi-Type Followers.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 1.—In the Government's vigorous purge of the Fascist-patterned Iron Guard, King Carol is emerging as a "strongman" ruler.The country was calm today after the killing of Corneliu Zelea Cod-reanu, chief of the Iron Guard, and 13 of his followers yesterday. The 14 all convicted of treason, were shot, authorities said, when they tried to escape from prison guards.There appeared to be a feeling of relief throughout the country.
King Carol was believed to occupy a strengthened position and he and his Premier, Dr. Miron Cristea, were generally applauded.There were indications that a Minister of the former anti-Semitic Octavian Goga government, Ion An-tonescu, would be involved in an investigation. Gen. Antonescu, relieved of his military command, is being questioned about reports he aided Rightists in Bessarabia.Cluj newspapers demanded that the death penalty be imposed for assaults of Floru Stefanescu, Congang rector of the University of Cluj, who was shot and seriously wounded Monday in what was said to be part of an Iron Guard conspiracy for rebellion.Police announced today the arrest of a 24-year-old student who, they said, was identified as one of Goga's attackers. The student tried to commit suicide as police burst into his room.General orders issued to police were to shoot on sight anyone caught at crime or violence. The police were told it would be "superfluous" to try to prevent crime with oral commands.Authorities, taking precautionary steps, were confident Codreanu's death would put an end to Iron Guard.

country from abroad last month, increasing the gold stock of the United States to a record of more than 14 billion dollars, the New York in Many Fields.

By the Associated Press.

PRAGUE, Dec. 1.—Czecho-Slovakia henceforth will work hand in hand with Germany through a government of youth, the new President of the diminished republic,
Dr. Emil Hacha, declared today.Mass was celebrated in Saint Vitus Cathedral today in honor of Dr. Hacha. Carlo Cardinal Kaspar, Archbishop of Prague and Primate of Bohemia, officiated and conveyed to the new President the Pope's blessing, transmitted through the papal secretary of state."It is not difficult to understand these new developments, since a glimpse at the man clearly reveals the joint space of living," Dr. Hacha said in an interview with the correspondent of the Lokalsender of Berlin. "We should never forget Germany in many fields always has been an example for us."For the turn from the days before Germany absorbed Czecho-Slovak Sudetenland, the president who is 66 years old, said he would "call as many men of the younger generation as possible into the Government."The Republic's policy toward Nazi Germany, said the president, must be a very close relationship, born out of a great idea, a relationship in which "destiny has played its part."The big task ahead, he emphasized, was to acquaint the people properly with the new situation.
After Parliament elected Dr.
Hacha by 272 votes of 312 yesterday he accepted the resignation of Premier General Jan Strykov. Rudolf Beran, a Deputy, chairman of the newly formed party of National Unity and a conservative who frequently opposed policies of former President Eduard Benes, was asked by Hacha to form a new Cabinet.

from the Property You Leave

To provide maximum benefits from the property you leave you must solve three problems satisfactorily. First: You must eliminate all unnecessary expenses, taxes and costs of transferring your estate to your heirs. Second: You must protect your estate as far as possible from investment and management losses. Third: You must arrange each beneficiary's share of your estate in the manner that will contribute most to his or her welfare.

Here are some of the expenses and costs that you may save under a properly planned will:

1. The cost of the administrator's or executor's bond. (This cost may be saved by an appropriate provision in your will or by naming this Company as executor.)
2. The cost of the guardian's fee and of the guardian's bond on the shares of your estate set aside for minor beneficiaries. (These costs may be saved by leaving in trust the shares of your estate going to minor beneficiaries.)
3. Double or triple taxation of the same estate. (This may be avoided if you leave your estate in trust.)
4. Double or triple administration fees. (This may be avoided if you leave your estate in trust.)
5. Liquidation losses from the forced sale of assets to provide cash for payment of taxes, debts and estate administration costs. (This may be avoided by the purchase of sufficient life insurance payable under a properly drawn life insurance trust.)
6. Losses due to your executor's unfamiliarity with the pitfalls, the problems and the technicalities of estate administration. (These losses may be avoided by naming this Company as executor of your will.)

Under modern conditions people of means cannot afford not to leave their estates in trust. Double taxation is just one penalty if you do not leave your estate in trust.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Luke Hart's Proposal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
As a member of the Missouri Bar Association and the American Bar Association, I was interested in an article I saw in the press that Luke E. Hart, president of the St. Louis Lawyers' Association, proposes to appoint a committee to examine the files of the St. Louis papers with the purpose of taking some disciplinary action against them.

There is a like, ill-considered spirit manifesting itself by the bar in other cities. A committee of the Los Angeles Bar Association recently filed contempt charges against the Los Angeles Times for certain editorial comment. This case will probably find its way to the Supreme Court of the United States, where freedom of the press, under the Constitution, will be the issue.

Mr. Hart is reported as having said that judges, lawyers and laymen are afraid to perform their duty under the watchful eyes of the press. They will be afraid only when they know their action is dishonest.

One of America's greatest lawyers, Elihu Root, said: "We need journalistic agitation to bring home to lawyers the intense dissatisfaction which the public feels. It is all but impossible for the lawyer to look at our system and product with fresh, unprejudiced eyes."

A noted United States District Attorney says: "Some day a shock will come to bench and bar when an outraged public takes law tinkering out of the hands of lawyers and judges and does the job itself."

Another Judge in New York, F. E. Johnson, says: "Today the bar is deplorable in need of gentlemen. Too many men that should have been plumbers and paper hangers are practicing law."

We know that the public generally considers it a privilege to say: "All lawyers are crooks."

While the bar of St. Louis is not all pure white, as its court proceedings disclose, it will compare favorably with the bar of other cities, and the cleaning up process is making good progress—with the aid of a fearless press.

The bar associations throughout the United States need the helpful aid of the press of the nation, not a spy committee that will alienate its most helpful co-operation. And, after all has been said, the lawyers of Missouri have subscribed to the principle: The voice of the people is the supreme law.

J. F. Los Angeles.

Call for the Lie Detector.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
WOULD you like to know which of the "Big Four" let information leak out about the witness against Londe? I myself, don't know, but I can tell how to find out.

The St. Louis Police Department recently spent several hundred dollars on a lie-detector. Get a psychologist, together with a reporter who is familiar with St. Louis gangsters, to compose a list of questions; then call in the four who knew where the witness worked and subject them to the test.

WONDERING.

When Insanity Runs Amuck.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
HAS brutality become king? Because a bully in his childhood or early manhood finds life crude, does that justify him later in leaving it raw?

Today, as religion, philosophy and psychology weep, bewildered, they are asking these questions. Time was when a despised, clearly defined humanitarian principles, such as justice, temperance, understanding and their handmaids, mercy and service, found ready advocates and heroic defenders each time that insanity ran amuck. Reason and righteousness animated and humanly. Then, the tyrants, becoming nationally intolerant, found themselves facing an aroused international public opinion calling for a crusade.

Water for the Birds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I AM making a plea that water be given our little feathered friends during the winter. I have been feeding broken bits of bread to the birds for years, and this winter I bought a pan to furnish them with water.

Often when I give them food and water, they will gather around the water first. Of course, during cold weather, it is necessary to break the ice in the pan every morning.

JULIE BRUER.

Mathilde Rathenau's Letter.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
IN a recent issue of your paper, I saw a reference to the letter that Rathenau's mother wrote to the mother of his assassin. It reads as follows:

"To grief unexpressed, I give you my hand, you, of all women the most pitiable. Say to your son that in the name and spirit of him he has murdered, I forgive, even as God may forgive, if before an earthly Judge he makes a full and frank confession of his guilt and before a heavenly one repent. Had he known my son, the noblest man earth bore, he had rather turned the weapon on himself than on him. May these words give peace to your soul."

CHARLES NAGEL.

THE SOUTH'S CHANCE.

The Southern Conference on Human Welfare, organized at a meeting called in Birmingham at the suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, has a difficult task set out for it.

One of these obstacles lies in overcoming the natural political inertia of the section. When Gov. Graves of Alabama and Senator Smith of South Carolina express shock at the resolutions adopted by the conference, there is every reason to believe they reflect the sentiment of a majority of the electorate. Agitation for such things as the abolition of poll taxes and the granting of a greater measure of economic as well as political equality to the Negroes has been going on for some years without winning out at the ballot box or in the legislative halls.

So one function of the conference is to work for such a remodeling of popular sentiment as will make its objectives politically possible. But the political difficulties in the way of furthering human welfare in the South are not one whit more formidable than the economic obstacles.

As Herbert Agar points out in "Pursuit of Happiness," his new history of the Democratic party, the South is suffering from sectional exploitation from without as well as from class exploitation from within. The effect of the nation's protective tariff policy, together with the concentration of the credit machinery in the North from the close of the Civil War until the Wilson administration, and to a lesser extent since, made the South a sort of economic colony of the North and East. Meanwhile, devotion to the one-crop system of agriculture has given rise to a large class of tenant farmers and share-croppers who suffer from the severest restriction of mass purchasing power to be found anywhere in the country.

To quote Mr. Agar:

These twin problems are further complicated by the fact that it is hard to check class exploitation except by adding to the power of the Federal Government, and it is almost equally hard to check regional exploitation except by adding to the power of the local governments. This is one reason for the increasing conflict within the Democratic party between the centralizers (mostly from the North and East) and the regionalists (mostly from the South and West).

This conflict is vividly illustrated by the division over the wage-hour bill in the last Congress. Some Southern Congressmen, taking the regional view, opposed the wage-hour bill. They knew it would have a tendency to stop the flow of industry to the South to fill up the economic vacuum existing there. Some other Southern Congressmen were willing to see this sacrifice made in order to give industrial workers the nation over the protection of a minimum wage and maximum hour law.

Such Southern support as the bill received was based on the understanding that the section would be indemnified for sacrificing part of its wage differential by the removal of the freight-rate discriminations which hamper its industries. Yet nothing has been done to give effect to this understanding, and the prospect is by no means bright that anything will be done. The railroads are against it, and so are most of the Congressmen from the populous North and East, who are too shortsighted to see that if the South were brought up to economic par, the country as a whole would benefit.

If the South is ever to win fair freight rates, now is the time for it to fight. The Interstate Commerce Commission will be headed for the coming year by Marjorie M. Caskie, a Virginian by birth and an Alabamian by adoption. He is probably as well acquainted as any man with the harm wrought against the South by the freight rate differentials, and is said to be anxious to correct the condition.

This is one matter upon which the "Cotton Ed" Smiths and the officers of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare can join forces without stint or reservation.

About that secret wedding: Sir Oswald, the groom, was there, Adolf Hitler, the best man, was there, and the bride was also present.

CRIME 2; LAW 0.

Two revealing instances of the law's delays—and their frequent consequences—have come to light here in the last few days.

More than a year ago, on Oct. 21, 1937, Raymond Coyle, a steel worker who had refused to join a union, was beaten to death. Charles Lane, a member of the union, was arrested three days later and confessed participation in the fatal attack. He was indicted by the grand jury Nov. 4, 1937. Lane named three alleged accomplices (arrested and indicted just a year ago yesterday) and was expected to be a witness against them. Now, as a result of Circuit Attorney Miller's carelessness, he has escaped from the City Sanitarium.

The other case is that of Isadore Londe, arrested last June 22 and identified in the bombing of a cleaning shop three weeks before. He was indicted June 23, and released on $25,000 bond five days later. Eleven days ago, just before the date set for Londe's trial, the star witness against him was the victim of a murderous attack by two gunmen.

Suitably prompt court action in these two important cases would have allowed no time for the underworld to score its twin triumphs against law and order.

Bob Zupke may not be doing so well at Illinois, but his comic-strip protégé, Ned Brant at Carter, is every inch a Rose-Bowler.

A CONTROVERSY IN ADJUSTMENT.

The long drawn out controversy between the Missouri State Building Commission and electric utility interests at Jefferson City appears to be on the way to settlement. As reported by Gov. Stark, the plan now is to run the power line, on which the State wants to carry current from its electric plant at the State Penitentiary to the auxiliary prison eight miles west, on poles of the Missouri Power and Light Co. through Jefferson City. Outside the city, the company would share the use of State-erected poles on which the line would be carried, for rural electrification purposes.

The plan which the Governor outlines has obvious good points. It makes it unnecessary to run another string of poles through Jefferson City. Poles are an eyesore and their wires increase interference with radio reception. It brings the State and a public utility into sensible co-operation. One string of poles, half of them utility-owned, half of them State-owned, will serve the purposes of both. Maintenance costs can be easily and equitably shared.

The plan, however, is no capitulation by the State Building Commission to the utility. The State would have its line from its plant to the auxiliary prison.

Its power would be used. Secretary of State Brown and State Treasurer Winn, who opposed use of State power at the auxiliary prison on the grounds that it would interfere with "private enterprise," win no victory under the plan Gov. Stark announces.

AN INDICTMENT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

It is a sweeping indictment which is returned by a committee of nationally known educators that has been sitting in judgment on the country's public schools. This is the castigation which this group visits upon its own profession:

America cannot be governed satisfactorily or administered industrially in the days that lie ahead on the basis of the kind of schooling 80 per cent of the boys and girls now receive.

They have no idea what work means, what sorts of opportunities there are, how to look for work—or how to work when they get a job.

They are not prepared to be useful citizens or to enter community or home life. Few have any protection against mob hysteria, propaganda, shallow prejudice or economic gold bricks.

The whole school curriculum needs reconstruction, so as to develop the abilities of youth in working together in modern industrial life and in acting together in intelligent and self-restraining self-government.

Here is a challenge which deserves to be discussed long and earnestly in the faculty room of every public school in the country. It tends to confirm, perhaps, the opinion already held by a considerable number of thoughtful persons.

Too much of our schooling, it would seem, is devoted to imparting formalized information which has little to do with enabling the student to live to the best advantage his life in the environment in which he is destined to spend it. Too many students, in the judgment of most educators, are trained for white collar pursuits and too few for the trades.

At the same time, the average high school student is graduated without having been taught the tenth part of the economics, sociology and political theory he must have to be a really qualified voter in this complex age.

The nation is spending $1,950,000,000 annually upon public education. The taxpayer has a right to expect that this is expended so as to produce maximum results in preparing youth for efficient participation in a democratic society.

THE REWARD OF INDOLENCE.

Among the human race, considerable running and fro usually is required in the process of acquiring a mate. But the Malayan gavia (a crocodile) at the Zoo is going to annex a spouse simply by putting on a stirring exhibition of sheer inertia.

This aquatic reptile reposes in the Snake House pool in a state of placid calm, giving no sign of life except every half hour to shift one front paw about a quarter of an inch. Zoo visitors, impatient with such quietude, have been pelting the beast with pennies and mills. These accumulate in the pool and, as Director Vierheller explained the other day to his distinguished visitor, Dr. Raymond L. Dittmars of the New York Zoo, "we're saving them to buy a mate for him." The matrimonial fund was increased by $2, plus uncounted mills, last time the pool was cleaned.

Well, why not? Mastery of any art, whether the industrious little bee's or the languid crocodile's, is to be applauded and awarded. If absolute lassitude will win a wife for Mr. Gavial, maybe on occasion it will bring some dividends to feverishly scurrying humanity as well.

The next time an important witness is to be safeguarded, the Circuit Attorney's office might find a secluded corner for him on the front page.

MADISON COUNTY'S NEW ERA.

A new day has come in Madison County. Commercial gambling is no more. This time it has closed down without any raids such as those of Coroner Billings before the Supervisors refused to pay the expenses of his anti-gambling campaign. The resort operators themselves have put their tables and dice and slot machines away and shut the doors. The explanation is simply that a new State's Attorney and a new Sheriff took office today. R. W. Griffith and Walter R. Wittman, Republicans elected to these posts in November, pledged themselves to end commercial gambling and to break its tie-up with county politics.

Messrs. Griffith and Wittman, it can be predicted safely, will find that this is only the beginning, not the end. Gambling has paid handsomely in Madison County. If many have lost money at the Hyde Park Club in Venice, a resort drawing a large St. Louis trade, its operators have done well by themselves. The profits in commercialized lotto were well indicated by the promptness with which the Venice Lotto Club moved to Belleville when Coroner Billings went to work.

The influences behind this business will be brought to bear on the new Sheriff and new State's Attorney sooner or later. Will they be able to make good then on their campaign pledge? Meanwhile, Madison County might find it illuminating to peruse Herbert Asbury's new book on gambling rackets, entitled "Suckers' Progress."

The newly elected St. Louis County Republicans started off with a bang by promising, at a special meeting, to work for a legislative program to eliminate the fee system of compensating office-holders.

MR. OPPENHEIM WOULDN'T BE INTERESTED.

The Nazi spy trial in New York was a decided dud so far as the glamorous traditions of E. Phillips Oppenheim are concerned. Evidence showed that the pay was paltry, the "military secrets" were mostly ludicrous commonplaces and the foreign agents themselves chiefly confused fumbler. The higher-ups named in the indictment may have been dashing and portentous figures, but they were safe in Germany.

The trial, nevertheless, was useful in demonstrating that this country is within the realm of Nazi snooping, and that espionage is being conducted here. President Roosevelt was sufficiently concerned to urge a few weeks ago that the next Congress take steps to strengthen the laws and reinforce precautionary measures. There is no major spy activity here as compared with Europe, but in a period of world tension, the United States must be and is on guard.

The Republican National Committee flung the liberal Kenneth Simpson to the wolves and elected the conservative Hastings to the Executive Committee. The Old Guard never surrenders, and never dies.

ON FILE BECAUSE OF NEIGHBORS.

Where the New Deal Is Reactionary

In breaking down illiberalism of his predecessors, President has created reaction of his own, says magazine of business; admits administration has enacted many wise reforms, but charges it meanwhile has established a "bureaucratic superstate before which individualism is helpless"; need is for more liberty and less institutionalism.

From Fortune.

THE New Deal at certain extremes is now aligned with the forces of world reaction. There is little that can be said for the previous practices of the Republican party, which had consistently identified itself with the use of Federal power for similar thrusts. In relation to the down the illiberalism of his predecessors, Mr. Roosevelt has erected an illiberalism of his own—a whole new set of reactionary restrictions and interferences, designed for the public benefit, in the reiterated name of democracy, but falling like a shadow across the American dream.

Many of the New Deal reforms have been wise. Many are irreversible. Many should have been instituted long ago. But these facts do not alter, and certainly do not extenuate, the deeper fact that the New Deal's conception of government has in large measure been government for the people from the top—that the numerous bureaus and committees, commissions and quasi-judicial agencies, all of them charged with "fixing" something, are gradually piling up into the image of a superstate, before which individualism is helpless.

The Washington assumption (shared by many people) that "Washington will fix it" must be regarded as wholly dangerous. Should the New Deal continue along this reactionary line, it will prove itself to be as shortsighted as the Republicans were. For the principles of individualism will not give way.

Millions of Europeans have only heard of liberty, but Americans have lived it. They have profited by it, and it is inconceivable that they will not eventually demand a Government whose reforms, no matter how strenuous, will begin with its principles.

As the situation in Europe retrogresses toward the more primitive forms of government, the revolutionary tradition of the United States will provide the only leadership in the world. And any politician who supposes that the American people, faced with this biggest opportunity that liberty has ever created for them, will let that tradition die in favor of a beehive society, is gambling with something more than his political life.

The American dream was the product of the great revolution in the Western world, a revolution which had been gradually manifesting itself since the Renaissance, but which finally matured politically in the nineteenth century. The basic motive power of that revolution was the individual, and the basic forces against which the individual revolted were the forces of institutionalism.

The libertarian revolution, epitomized in the American dream, was a turning point in the history of man, an irreversible experience. With regard to it, all subsequent movements have been counter-revolutions, and any doctrine that seeks now to obliterate it—any doctrine that advocates a return to institutionalism—is a counter-revolutionary doctrine.

Freedom, which erects the institution of the state above the individual as something more important and more sacred, is patently a counter-revolution. And, on the other hand, the Russian revolution cannot be taken seriously by those who have dreamed the American dream. Russia experienced a revolution, in the sense that she broke through the institutionalism that had held her in thrall for centuries; but this was a revolution only for Russia and other lands for similar thrusts. In relation to the American dream, the Russian revolution was a counter-revolution.

Like Fascism, Communism has set up a superstate, to which all individuals are enslaved. And in view of this fact, it is time for Americans to come to grips with the simple reality that the trouble with Communism is not that it is too radical but that it is too reactionary.

Indeed, against the background of the American dream, it ought to be clear that all the statements of Europe are now engaged in freeing the evolutionary process to create a civilization higher than, yet comparable to, the group behavior of the ante. Every statesman sees it as his first duty to consolidate what he already has. This process of consolidation must inevitably result in an increase of the power of the state at the expense of the individual.

Here we are concerned with the United States. Are not these processes of freeing also observable on this side of the Atlantic? The answer is that they are.

As a clue, consider the word "liberty" itself. This highly particularized word pervades the great public documents of the United States and the national songs. But it has been supplanted recently by the generalized word "democracy," a word that founders used sparingly and the song writers not at all.

The orthodox American meaning of democracy is government of the people, by the people, for the people—with particular emphasis on the "of" and the "by." The unhappy fact is that democracy has been perverted. It has been conceived of without the "of" and the "by" and has been taken to mean government "for" the people only.

This is the way most of the Red reactionaries construe the word, and in this sense the Russian Government claims to be the most democratic in the world. All other perversions of democracy are also manifestations of reaction in that they exclude the ideal of individualism.

For this reason, the current tendency on the part of American politicians and journalists to talk only of democracy, and to neglect the word "liberty," is both stupid and dangerous. Anyone can hide behind "democracy," from Hitler to Huey Long.

Liberty, on the other hand, is a banner only for those who believe in the revolution, and believe in carrying on the revolution. He who is not for democracy may, nevertheless, be for some perverted type of it. But he who is not for liberty is against it.

Genus Politicus

Books in the News

THE politicians are the Government—national, state and local—in the United States. They are the persons elected to the 800,000 elective offices. The authors of the book are elected many times. They chart the policies which determine a large extent the conditions under which life is carried on. This being so, our most important task is that of picking the right politicians.

So runs the reasoning of a thoughtful student of politics, Dr. J. T. Salter of the University of Wisconsin, in the introduction of a new book of which he is the editor, "The American Politician" (University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.). The book is an attempt by Dr. Salter and others to facilitate that "right" picking.

The method is that of case study. Eighteen politicians and one labor leader are the subjects of crisp, short biographies. The authors are critical, yet, on the whole, pretty much all are sympathetic—that is, they explain the success of the subjects in terms of those who support them. Individualism is stressed; one politician's strength is shown to be his organizing ability, that another his pleasing personality, of another his record of solid achievement, and so on. Mayor LaGuardia, prophetically perhaps, is given first place. Paul J. Kern, president of the New York City Civil Service Commission, who writes the sketch, finds his subject "full of accomplishment, ripe with the laurels of conquest and firm in the hearts of his fellow citizens"—his future "written in the stars."

Five United States Senators are examined. Wagner of New York, handled by John C. O'Brien, a Washington correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, is revealed as probably the most consistent liberal in Congress. The New Deal's legislative ship pilot and deck hand, he is nonetheless a "blurred and shadowy figure" who does not put on a good show. Vandenberg of Michigan looks to 1940, awaiting the country's call, so Paul M. Cunnances of the University of Michigan writes. La Follette is credited with skill at using common-sense perspectives and grasp of twentieth century problems. Tydings of Maryland would have been a liberal force in Cleveland's day, or Wilson's; now he is outstripped in his own party.

Among the others led down the rungs are Frank McRut, "an opportunist," and Farley, "supreme political pragmatist." Milwaukee's Socialist Mayor Hoan, who quotes Lincoln more than Marx. Five articles deal with local politicians. The last leader included is John L. Lewis, whose great constituency is demonstrated to be primarily a political one.

THOMAS MANN gives his opinion of the Munich accord and its authors in a slender book, sardonically titled "The Peace" (Alfred A. Knopf, New York). To the German exile, as to many others, the Munich pact of the Czech Republic was "one of the foulest pages in history." With eloquence, he assails the democracies for a scale surrender, wholly unnecessary in his view, that strengthened the arms of Nazism. Yet Dr. Mann is not without hope, as the unconscionable peace of Versailles could not endure, neither can "a peace founded like this one, on the ruins of treachery and betrayal of the peoples."

THE German post, played by and novelist Ernst Toller he lived in the United States, a territory of the capitals of democracy, with a constructive, controversial, non-political, humane proposal for aid to the Spanish people. The surplus of the world he mobilized to Spain, under convoy if necessary, to be distributed through Society of Friends to the city population, according to need, regardless of whether they are in territory held by France or the loyalists.

As an individual working over, he has interviewed Government, church and trade union officials in the Scandinavian countries in Great Britain and in France. A potential international organization therefore already exists, needs but to be co-ordinated into action.

Mr. Toller proposes an organization somewhat along the line of the American Relief Administration as it was administered in the great war by Herbert Hoover. The governments willing to cooperate would purchase surplus foodstuffs from the over-farmed numbers of them are doing the work—and collaborate through international organization to transmit it to Spain. Mr. Toller minds us that we have in this country 6,000,000 surplus bushels of wheat; he asserts that in Sweden there is a surplus of 125,000 tons of wheat and rye. There are surpluses in Canada; in England and Scandinavia thousands of tons of herring and kippers are thrown into the ocean; in Brazil there are thousands of tons of meat that find no market.

And in Spain? Mr. Toller shows pictures of pellagra cases in Madrid. There are 40,000 cases in that city alone. Although numerous organizations and agencies are operating in Spain to children, their efforts are inadequate. The whole city population in loyalist Spain is suffering from desperate undernourishment; the results of which tell on a whole generation, not to mention what the outcome of the war may be.

The continued debilitation of organic resistance of the Spanish people makes them peculiarly subject to epidemics, and the outbreak of such epidemics may spread results of the Spanish war far beyond the Spanish borders.

We still do not know whether the Spanish plague is really called "dysentery" which raged over the world during the great war, had any connection with it; we do know that it killed more people than war itself, and was nowhere typhoid. The horrible typhus epidemic certainly originated on the physical conditions of war.

Intervene—With Food!

THE German poet, playwright and novelist Ernst Toller has arrived in the United States as a refugee of the capitalist democratic world, with a constructive, non-political, wholly humanitarian proposal for aid to the Spanish population of Spain. Briefly, he suggests that the surplus food of the world be mobilized and sent to Spain, under convoy if necessary, to be distributed through the Society of Friends to the civilian population, according to need and regardless of whether they are living in territory held by Franco or by the loyalists.

As an individual working on his own, he has interviewed Government, church and trade union officials in the Scandinavian countries, in Great Britain and in France, and everywhere met a warm response. A potential international organization therefore already exists, and needs but to be co-ordinated and put into action.

Mr. Toller proposes an organization somewhat along the lines of the American Relief Administration, but the great war by Herbert Hoover. The government is willing to participate in the purchase of surplus food from their own farmers—members of them are doing this already—and collaborate through an international organization to assist it to Spain. Mr. Toller estimates that we have in this country 4,000,000 surplus bushels of wheat; he asserts that in Sweden there is a surplus of 125,000 tons of wheat and rye. MRS. MORTON J. MAY'S WILL FILED; THREE TRUSTS SET UP

Daughter, Three Other Relatives to Share Estate of Wife of Senator

The will of Mrs. Florence Goldman May, wife of Morton J. May, president of the May Department Stores Co., operating the Famous-Barr Co., was filed in Clayton today.

The bulk of the estate, the bulk of which has not been indicated, was placed in three equal trusts for the benefit of Mrs. May's daughter, Morton David May, her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Jane Waldheim, and three other relatives.

Mrs. May, 54 years old, died Saturday at her home, 11 Brentmoor park, Clayton, after several months' illness.

Specific bequests were: To Mrs. May G. Rice, 1 Oak Knoll, a sister, a portion of the remaining part of the $14,550 indebtedness; to Alvin G. Goldman, 2 Oak Knoll, brother, an amount equaling the canceled indebtedness of Mrs. Rice, and to the Lesser-Goldman Co.; to Miss Emma Kaufman, a friend, $320,000, and to the children of Mrs. May, $100,000 each.

One of the three trusts is to pay Mrs. May a month to Emma Hahn of Los Angeles, Cal., a cousin; $65 a month to Mrs. Cora Strauss, 6838 Westman avenue, an aunt; and $100 a month to Mrs. Helen R. Goldman of New York, Mrs. May's stepmother. The other trusts, each comprising one-third of the residue of the estate, are to yield $10,000 a year each to the son and daughter, the principal to go ultimately to their descendants.

HERMAN B. WELLS TAKES PRESIDENCY OF INDIANA U.

President of State University of Indiana, U. S. Educated in Illinois and Wisconsin.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Dec. 1.—Herman B. Wells, 36 years old, was inaugurated yesterday as President of Indiana University. He is the first head of a State University in the United States.

The new president pledged to the students that would recognize "the first function of a university is to strengthen the arms of the democratic way of life" in the world. Wells, who was educated at the University of Wisconsin and at the University of Chicago, was made acting president in June, 1937.

OTTO M. CARTALL REQUEST TO MASONIC HOME UPHELD

Private Settlement With Niece Who Sought to Break Will Is Reported by Attorneys.

The will of Otto M. Cartall, which named the Masonic Home of Missouri as ultimate beneficiary of his $225,000 estate was upheld yesterday by Circuit Judge Charles E. Williams after a brief hearing.

Attorneys said a private settlement had been arranged with Cartall's niece, Pearl Anna Lindsay, who had filed suit to break the will. She was in court yesterday and testified that she was aware of the proceeding was to uphold the will.

Cartall, an accountant who died two years ago, placed the estate in trust with the provision that 82 percent of the income should go to his widow, and 18 percent to his children. The principal was to go to the Masonic Home on the death of Mrs. Cartall.

Slies of Heart Attack; Brother Tries to Revive Her.

Miss Blanche Long, a teacher at Harrison School, died this morning of a heart attack in her home, 928 Maple place. Her brother, Dr. Joseph Long, who had been treating her for heart disease for 10 years, reported he found her lying on the bathroom floor at 7:30 a. m.

He attempted to revive her and called for a Fire Department in-hallator. After an hour's work with the in-hallator, she was pronounced dead. She was 61 years old.

ESTATE OF DR. ALLMEROTH

Values in Inventory at $51,579 With $13,186 Cash.

Dr. Edward Allmeroth, who died last Oct. 14, left an estate valued at $51,579 in an inventory filed for probate yesterday. Real estate is valued at $25,700, bonds at $12,400 and cash at $13,186.

Under terms of his will, two brothers and three sisters are to receive $500 and three children of a brother-in-law are to get the residue in trust. Dr. Allmeroth, a physician, 69 years old, lived at 4144 W. Carter avenue.

GRADE TEACHERS HEAR SCHOOL SURVEY HEAD

Dr. Strayer Talks on Education's Aims on Association's 20th Anniversary.

Fundamental purposes of education, in the modern view, are self-realization and the development of adequate human relations, economic efficiency and civic responsibility, Dr. George D. Strayer of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, declared at a dinner of the St. Louis Grade Teachers' Association at Hotel Statler last night.

The association was celebrating its twentieth anniversary. Dr. Strayer is director of the general survey of the school system being made for the Board of Education.

With all of our emphasis in the modern world on economic efficiency," he said, "it has been asserted that we are essentially a nation of economic illiterates. In our modern world the school has a primary obligation to equip children to deal intelligently with the economic problems which must confront all of them. The school can do much to develop satisfaction in good workmanship. All children before they quit school should have had the most that can be offered by way of choice of occupation and preparation for active participation in the work of the world.

"As a citizen, every person is called upon to pass judgment on matters of economic policy. All boys and girls should become critical consumers of all the goods and services which are offered for their acceptance. It is not sufficient to propose that economic efficiency can be learned outside of school. The too common experience of boys and girls who lack efficiency in this area is a life which is unsatisfactory because of their inability to find the areas in which they can live and work with greatest satisfaction."

Support of Democracy.

As to citizenship, the speaker maintained that "one of the greatest challenges to our schools is found in the need for enlisting them in the support of American democracy."

"Education," he continued, "has a primary responsibility to develop social understanding and critical judgment. Nobody can act wisely in our society except as he is tolerant. The democratic state will cease to exist when we seek to regiment people or to impose upon them a single belief or point of view. Everywhere in the United States today we need to emphasize with boys and girls the importance of law observance."

In the matter of developing satisfactory human relationships, Dr. Strayer declared that schools should be as much concerned with helping children to form friendships and to develop their ability to cooperate with others as with making them conversant with literature or mathematics.

"Nothing that can be described in terms of knowledge," he added, "has greater worth than the contribution which education may make in the field of homogeneity."

It takes an inquiring mind to make a truly educated person, the speaker went on, turning to the fourth phase of this thesis.

Stability of Individual.

"A very important factor in self-realization," he said, "is the emotional tone or stability of the individual. Unless boys and girls learn to work happily and acquire the feeling of well-being that comes from successful achievement, school experience may result in maladjustment. Failure in school work may develop to a point where the individual boy or girl comes to take an anti-social attitude. Lack of adjustment to one's fellows may be a serious handicap to a successful living. We render a disservice if we ask children to undertake tasks which are beyond their abilities."

In conclusion, he said it was known from certain investigation that "the school in which children live happily in which they are engaged in many meaningful activities, is the school in which they learn most. We know, as well, that the burden which society bears in caring for those who are socially maladjusted or mentally ill can in a very considerable measure be relieved, if we learn how to provide a stimulating and satisfying environment, an opportunity for economic well-being, and the ideal and practice of accepting social responsibility in children, in young people, and in adults."

While Dr. Strayer carefully refrained from committing himself, educators understood that his exposition of the ideals and purposes of education amounted to a forecast of a line likely to be followed in the survey report.

U. S. Court Clerk Dies in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Henry W. Freeman, 69 years old, clerk at the United States District Court here, collapsed and died of a heart attack in a restaurant last night. For many years he was a law partner of Michael L. Igoe, now United States District Judge. Freeman was an Assistant United States District Attorney from 1909 to 1915.

Art Prize to Be Given at Dinner.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

"YOU are commanded to appear at the last ball given in honor of his notorious majesty, the Uavelled Prophet and his court of love and beauty"—so read the invitations being distributed by George W. Thatcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hudson Thatcher, Chambers road, Ferguson, for a Dutch treat party Saturday night, Dec. 10, at 9 o'clock at the Farmers' Club, St. Ferdinand Township. Dispensing with the messenger, customarily used, Mr. Thatcher is personally delivering the invitations mimeographed on large sheets of yellow paper. Also included on the sheet is the information that the summons is "By order of Grand Odeus" and the notice, "Costumes obligatory."

On the back is a detailed map giving directions for reaching the club from St. Louis.

Included in the evening's entertainment will be crowning of the new queen of the "Uavelled Prophet" and the retiring of the previous monarch.

Working with Mr. Thatcher on arrangements are Abbott Thomas and David Burdeau.

Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, 31 Westmoreland place, is expecting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Blumer, and their daughter, Miss Nancy and Miss Priscilla, for the holiday season. Mrs. Blumer and her younger daughter, Miss Priscilla, will arrive Dec. 17. The latter is a student at St. Timothy's School, Catonsville, Md. Miss Nancy, who is a debutante of the winter in Boston, will come with her father Christmas eve. She made her formal bow at a dance at the Myopia Hunt Club, Sept. 30.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter, 3 Portland place, will sail from New York Dec. 16, for England. They will spend Christmas with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Easton, Monks of London. The date of their return is indefinite.

Miss Dorothy Cabell will arrive Dec. 17 from Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., to make her debut during the Christmas holiday season. She will be with her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Matsson Cabell, 6160 Waterman avenue, and will be present at a cocktail party to be given the afternoon of her arrival by her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Sage Wightman Jr., at their home, 635 Skinner boulevard.

Several other parties have been planned in Miss Cabell's honor.

Mrs. Henry G. Whitehead, 8 Washington terrace, and her daughter, Mrs. Edward Morton Banister, 4907 Argyle place, gave a luncheon today at Mrs. Whitehead's home for Miss Laura Hale Rand, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chambliss Rand, 7100 Delmar boulevard.

A large silver bowl filled with pearls, a blue and white plunium decorated the luncheon table arranged in the dining room for the debutantes. The room was lighted by blue tapers in silver holders. At a second table, similarly decorated and set in the room, Mrs. Whitehead and Mrs. Banister entertained members of Miss Rand's family.

Places for the following persons were marked by monogrammed compacts: Miss Martha Bixby, Miss Louise French, Miss Lida Lee Christie, Miss Betty Jones, Miss Margaret Adreon, Miss Caroline Gatch, Miss Suzanne White, Miss Frances Ellis, Miss Marian Spink Merrell, Miss Agnes Galt. At the hostess table were Mrs. Rand, Mrs. Rand's sister, Mrs. Gale F. Johnson, Mrs. Edgar E. Rand, Mrs. Joseph O. Rand, Mrs. Oscar Johnson and Mrs. Jackson Johnson.

Miss Warren Hobbs, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rocece C. Hobbs, 265 Union boulevard, will be the guest of honor at a buffet supper tonight, for which Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Tobin, 5 Kingsbury place, will be host and hostess.

Supper will be served from a large table in the dining room trimmed with chrysanthemums in autumn shades. The following debutantes and their escorts have been invited: Miss Nancy Blum Moffitt, Miss Caroline Morrison, Miss Mary Frances Hazleton, Miss Frances Howell Lewis, Miss Louise French, Miss Marian Spink Merrell, Miss Lida Lee Christie, Miss Betty Jones, Miss Frances Ellis, Miss Margaret Adreon, Miss Nancy Russell, Glennon McDonald, J. Lionberger Davis Jr., Stuart Smith, Harry B. Hazleton Jr., Robert Mueller Jr., Claiborne Skinner, Sears Lehmann Jr., Gaydes Deakes, Paul B. Jamison Jr., John C. Tobin Jr., Robert May Jr., Henry Schlapp and John Flanagan.

Many of the guests will leave the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tobin in time to attend the roller-skating party at the Arena to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Arden John Krumpholtz, 6901 Kingsbury boulevard, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Grote, 41 Briarcliff, at 11 o'clock. The guest of honor will be Miss Betsy Jones.

Married at St. John's Church

MRS. JOHN RANDOLPH HALL JR.

The former Miss Josephine Miles, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Miles of St. Joseph, Mo., whose marriage took place Thanksgiving Day in Singleton Memorial Chapel of St. John's Methodist Church. The bridegroom is the son of Lieut. Col. John Randolph Hall, former R. O. T. C. instructor at Washington University.

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Jones Jr., 6903 Kingsbury boulevard. About 125 members of the debutante set, dressed in informal attire, will attend. Miss Dorothy Mummert, a debutante of last year and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mummert, and Mr. and Mrs. Grote's younger daughter, Miss Dorothy Grote, will also be present with a group of their friends. Food will be served at arena concessions.

Miss Josie Conant, a student at the Cambridge School of Landscape Design in Cambridge, Mass., spent Thanksgiving and last week-end in Newburyport, Mass., with a classmate, Miss Cassandra Kinsman, at the home of Miss Kinsman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kinsman.

Miss Conant will return to St. Louis later this month to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kimball Conant, 19 Portland place, for the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmet T. Carter of the Senate Apartments, and their daughter, Miss Mary Frances Carter, will have as their guest for the Christmas holidays, Benjamin Daryl Whitely Sykes of Oxtion, Cheshire, England. He will arrive Dec. 23 and will remain until shortly after New Year's day. Mr. and Mrs. Carter and their daughter will give a cocktail party for their guest, Monday, Jan. 2.

Invitations for two parties were received by the debutantes set yesterday. Mrs. Anna T. Lively, 57 Lake Forest, issued cards for the debut reception of her daughter, Miss Virginia Anne, to take place at the St. Louis Woman's Club, Thursday afternoon, Dec. 22. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Ewing, 54 Kingsbury place, invited debutantes and their escorts to a buffet supper at their home in honor of their daughter, Miss Mary Louise Ewing, Tuesday, Dec. 27.

Mrs. Byron Kauffman Elliott of Boston will arrive today to spend a week with her mother, Mrs. Alice Orthwein Helander of the St. Regis Apartments, during Mr. Elliott's absence on a business trip. This will be her first visit here since her marriage in New York several months ago. She is the former Miss Helen Helander.

Two additional parties have been arranged in honor of Miss Phoebe Elinor Curran, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Donovan Curran. The first, a theater party, will be given Tuesday night, Dec. 27, by Mr. and Mrs. Philo Rockwell King, 14 Algonquin lane, Webster Groves, will take their guests to the American Theater to see George M. Cohan's show, "I'd Rather Be Right."

At a theater party Jan. 7, Miss Curran will share honors with Miss Nancy Greenleaf Martin at a performance of the Ballet Russe at the Municipal Auditorium. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ross McCarthy, 6481 Ellenwood avenue, will be host and hostess.

The wedding of Mrs. Virginia Welsch Marmont and Edwin Lee Lopata will take place at 4:30 o'clock the afternoon of Dec. 15 at Temple Shaare Emeth. Rabbi Julius Gordon will read the service.

LITTLE THEATER TRIES ITS LUCK WITH CRIME

'Blind Alley,' Melodrama of Robber and College Professor, Presented by Group.

By COLVIN McPHERSON

THE Little Theater of St. Louis last night demonstrated a new method by which society may proceed against its dangerous criminals. In a melodrama, "Blind Alley," which comes from Broadway and will be repeated on Union boulevard for some more performances, the non-professional company showed how a vicious gunman may be erased from the community of decent persons, without the help of the police.

Psychological, the invention of Dr. Sigmund Freud, forms the basis of the treatment. When the young desperado, Hal Wilson, his "moll" and two henchmen take refuge in the home of a university professor, Dr. William Anthony Shelby, Dr. Shelby sets to work with Wilson's subconscious. By the time he has fished out everything he finds there, Wilson's ego hasn't a complex to stand on, so he shoots himself quite dead.

The patient really is an unusual specimen. Twenty-three years old, native of Iowa, with a history of having robbed banks, he also suffers from a "mother fixation" and is on the verge of paranoia. Another dark thing is that the boy has killed a little playmate with a boulder, hanged her in the barn and stuffed her body down a cistern. And it worries him every now and then.

Most of the professor's probing of the gunman's past goes on off-stage and between acts for the visible section of the place and time is reserved for a pair of killings. Identification of the murderer and Wilson's most highly developed hysterics.

The reaction of the audience to the experiment was a few gasps when the criminals broke into the household and a few yelps when those present were well aware that it was only the Little Theater players having a good time for themselves.

Julian Luckett's interpretation of the gunman neglects the many models which the movies have to offer and is strictly non-professional but his scenes in torture, when the psychologist has him ensnared, are amply convincing. Ben Fry Jr., as Dr. Shelby, also is slow in warming up but gets along rather well in the latter part of the play.

Frances Buss' chief task as the "moll" is to say "ain't" as many times as possible and swagger in the manner of a Parisian demimondaine. Others in the cast are Keith Gunther, Mrs. Fry, Dolores McBratney, Betty McGraw, Joseph Lewis, Herman Waldman and Allan Gordon Jr.

BALLET RUSSE HERE

BEGINNING JAN. 6

Three-Day Performance Under Leonide Massine Includes New Dances.

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, under direction of Leonide Massine, will appear here with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for the sixth time, opening a three-day engagement Friday, Jan. 6 in the Opera House of the Municipal Auditorium.

Efrem Kurts and Anatole Flotoul, art, the ballet troupe's regular conductors, will direct the 87 members of the orchestra at each appearance. Performances will be given Friday night, Saturday afternoon and evening, and Sunday afternoon.

Some of the leading dancers in the organization are appearing for the first time in the United States this season. Outstanding in this group are Alicia Markova of England, Mia Slavenska, Yugoslavian; Lubov Roudenko, Bulgarian; Nini Thellade, Danish-Japanese, and Frederick Franklin, English dancer.

Besides Massine, who is principal dancer and choreographer as well as director of the ballet, other favorites of former seasons who are returning are Alexandra Danilova, Marc Plattoff, Lubov Rostova, Eugene Delarova and Roland Guardani.

Massine has arranged the choreography of four of the major new ballets to be seen here, "St. Francis," "Gaité Parisienne," "The Seventh Symphony," and "Bogatyr." Besides Massine, who is principal dancer and choreographer as well as director of the ballet, other favorites of former seasons who are returning are Alexandra Danilova, Marc Plattoff, Lubov Rostova, Eugene Delarova and Roland Guardani.

The six tableaux of "St. Francis" are based on legends of St. Francis of Assisi, and there are 11 separate orchestral compositions, many of them taken from folk music. The setting and costumes are representative of the Byzantine period in the twelfth century.

"Gaité Parisienne" is a depiction of Paris in the late nineteenth century, and "Bogatyr" is a spectacle based on legendary Russian heroes. Other novelties which will be presented are "Coppelia," "Bliss Bird," and "L'Espreu D'Amour."

All-Orchestral Program for Symphony Concerts.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, under direction of Vladimir Golschmann, will feature an all-orchestral program at regular concerts tomorrow afternoon and Saturday evening at the Municipal Auditorium. The program: "The Beautiful Danube," and Schumann's "Carnaval."

OLD FAVORITES HAVE MANY NEW WAYS

Mashed Potatoes Make Fine
Second Appearance on Any Dinner Table.

Few evening meals are planned that do not include potatoes in some form. In fact, potatoes and gravy are a pair quite as famous as ham and eggs or chicken and dumplings.

Potatoes are one of the important sources of vitamin C. In Northern Europe, including Ireland, scurvy was common up to the time that the potato was introduced after the discovery of America. As potatoes became common, scurvy became uncommon. During the past century, a potato crop failure over a wide area has usually been followed by an epidemic of scurvy during the following winter or early spring.

Baking potatoes is perhaps the simplest way of preparation and the one most commonly used. Properly baked potatoes are the foundation of good mashed potatoes. In order to prepare them properly place in a kettle with a tight cover, using as little water as possible. Season with salt and cover. Then bring to a boil as quickly as possible. Turn down heat and simmer until the potatoes are tender. Pour off the liquid and allow the potatoes to dry off for about one minute over low heat. Mash until free of lumps, add butter, milk, cream, or evaporated milk and beat until fluffy with a fork or slotted spoon. More seasoning may be added if desired. For an exotic touch add a few grains of nutmeg. Pasty mashed potatoes result from having used too much liquid.

If it is necessary to let potatoes stand for some time, place the bowl or pan in a kettle of hot water and cover with a towel.

An interesting vegetable plate may be arranged by placing in the center of a chop plate a fluffy mound of mashed potatoes. Group around vegetables of different colors and textures, asparagus, steamed squash, cut in cubes, small beets, buttered, mounds of spinach and creamed onions. Creamed carrots may be substituted for the onions.

Potato Meringue.
Mix together three cups mashed potatoes, two egg yolks, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons butter, hot milk or cream as needed. Whip until fluffy. Heap into a shallow baking dish. Cover with a meringue made of the two egg whites beaten stiff into which one-half cup grated mild cheese has been folded. Sprinkle lightly with paprika and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees) for 15 minutes.

Leftover mashed potatoes are a decided asset in planning what to do with holiday leftovers by way of turkey scraps and the like. To use up leftover turkey, chicken or roast, cut in small pieces. Put in the leftover gravy or a good rich white sauce along with bits of carrot, celery and a few peas if you want to use them up or to extend the meat. Line a casserole with mashed potatoes, fill the center with the creamed mixture. Cover with mashed potatoes, and brown in a fairly hot oven (400 degrees). If you are short on potatoes, use only to top the meat and gravy or sauce.

Potato Nests.
Shape mashed potatoes into little nests by dropping them on a greased baking sheet in mounds and making a hollow in each. Brush with butter, egg and brown under the broiler. Fill with creamed vegetables, meat or fish. Or line custard cups or little baking dishes with mashed potatoes, fill with a creamed vegetable, meat or fish, and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Brown under the broiler or in a quick oven.

VANILLA NUT ICE BOX COOKIES
Four cups sifted flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One cup butter or other shortening.
One cup sifted brown sugar.
Two cups sugar.
Two eggs.
One cup chopped pecans.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Sift flour once. Measure, add baking powder, salt and sift again. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together. Add beaten eggs, nuts and vanilla. Add dry ingredients gradually. Shape into rolls one and one-half inches in diameter. Let stand in refrigerator overnight or until hard enough to slice. Slice thin and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees F., 10 minutes. Makes six dozen cookies.

CREAM OF MUSHROOM SOUP
One pound mushrooms.
Six tablespoons butter.
Four tablespoons flour.
Two quarts milk.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Wash mushrooms in cold water and rinse well. Cut in slices without peeling. Slice stems as well as caps, discarding only ends of stems. Melt butter, put in mushrooms and cook over low heat for three to five minutes. Blend in flour, add milk slowly, stirring it in to give a smooth mixture. Continue cooking over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth. Season well with salt and pepper, adding a dash of cayenne, for real. Serve immediately. Serves eight.

FRUITY CUP CAKES GO WELL WITH SIMPLE SUPPERS

Fruity cup cakes are always a good dessert, when the question is one of a simple supper or luncheon. Raisin Apricot Cup Cakes.
Two-thirds cup seedless raisins.
One-half cup butter.
One cup sugar.
Two eggs.
Three-quarters cup apricot nectar.
Three cups sifted flour.
One teaspoon salt.
Four teaspoons baking powder.
Two teaspoons vanilla extract.
Rinse, drain and slice raisins. Cream butter, add sugar and cream thoroughly. Add beaten eggs and mix. Add nectar alternately with flour sifted with salt and baking powder, and beat. Add flavoring and daisies and stir to blend. Fill well greased muffin pans three-fourths full. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. Makes about 18 medium-sized cakes.

MAN-SIZED CANAPE SURE TO FIND

Canapes to be served with a favor if they represent a thing more recognizable than as an appetizer. It is to combine the charm of both, in some enticing blend.

Ripe Olive Canape.
Combine two-thirds of a chopped or sliced ripe olive half the amount of pickle relish moisten with just enough mustard to hold together. Thin sliced Swiss cheese with the mixture of ripe olive pickles relish and top with a cheese of similar thickness into squares slightly smaller than crackers. Butter crackers, range cheese layers on each, toast lightly under a broiler with a dash of tabasco sauce.

This amount will make 1 canape of the grilled variety is in excellent favor for groups of men and women, with cocktails, potent or otherwise.

COMPANY COCKTAIL

Three avocados.
One No. 2 1/2 can fruit cocktail.
Salad greens.
Peel, stone and halve avocados, being careful not to break. Place each half cut side up on a plate, garnish with greens. Fill avocados with fruit cocktail. (Save curried pudding sauce.) Serve well as a first course and pass French dressing.

SALMON A LA KING
One can salmon.
Two tablespoons butter.
Two tablespoons flour.
Three tablespoons fresh cucumber pickle chopped.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One and one-half cups milk.
One-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
Paprika.
One tablespoon minced parsley.

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and salt, then gradually add milk. Cook until thick and add chopped pickles. Heat and drain one can of salmon and put on a platter. Pour sauce over it and sprinkle with paprika and parsley.

Added Flavor.
Small additions of sugar improve the flavor of many tomato products, particularly canned tomatoes, chili sauce and catsup.

VEGETABLE BISQUE
Two tablespoons butter.
One teaspoon grated onion.
Two tablespoons flour.
Two cups milk.
One cup canned corn.
Three-quarters cup tomato juice or sieved canned tomatoes.
Three-quarters teaspoon salt.
Pepper.
Melt butter, add onion, blend in flour. Add milk slowly, stirring in carefully to prevent lumping. Cook until smooth and slightly thickened. Add corn and heat over boiling water for five minutes. Heat tomato juice separately and stir into milk and corn mixture slowly. Season well and serve at once. Serves five to six.

WAFFLES MAY NOW BE PLAIN OR ELABORATE
Even Simple Breakfast Waffle Adds Cheese, Ham or Nuts—Dessert Waffle Is Cake.

Leisurely Sunday breakfasts are usually good times to break out the family waffle iron. Then as the family drifts in to breakfast there is no problem of hot food. True, the waffle iron no longer makes its appearance only at the breakfast table. Waffles for Sunday evening when guests drop in are considered quite smart.

For breakfasts the plain waffle with perhaps ground ham or sliced bacon are the thing. Cheese or nuts may also be added. For supper they run the gamut from short-cake foundations to rich, whipped cream topped cakes. If you have a good foundation recipe, you can usually vary it to suit your fancy and to please your guests.

Waffles.
Two cups flour.
Four teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two cups milk.
One and one-half cups milk.
Three eggs.
Beat egg yolks and add milk. Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder and add to first mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last. Bake on a hot waffle iron until golden brown.

Sour Milk Waffles.
Two cups sifted flour.
One-fourth teaspoon soda.
Two tablespoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One tablespoon sugar.
Two egg yolks, well beaten.
One and three-fourths cups sour milk or buttermilk.
One-third cup melted butter.
Two egg whites, stiffly beaten.
Sift together the flour, soda, baking powder, salt and sugar three times. Combine egg yolks, milk and butter. Add to flour, beating until smooth. Fold in egg whites. Bake in a hot waffle iron until done. Makes four waffles.

For ham waffles sprinkle one-fourth cup of dried, uncooked ham over the batter just before closing the iron. Bacon may be used instead of ham.

Southern Waffles.
One cup boiling water.
One cup cornmeal.
Two cups sifted flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One and one-fourth teaspoons salt.
One tablespoon sugar.
Two cups milk.
Two egg yolks well beaten.
Three tablespoons melted butter.
Two egg whites, stiffly beaten.
Four boiling water over cornmeal. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar and sift three times. Add milk to corn meal then egg yolks and flour, and mix well. Fold in egg whites and bake in a hot waffle iron. Makes seven four-section waffles.

Spiced Waffles.
One-half cup butter.
One-half cup sugar.
One-half cup molasses.
One egg.
One-half teaspoon soda.
One-half cup buttermilk.
One and three-fourths cups cake flour.
One-fourth teaspoon cinnamon.
Three-fourths teaspoon ginger.
Dash of nutmeg.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Cream the butter and sugar, then add molasses and beaten egg and beat thoroughly. Sift together the spices, flour and salt. Add soda to buttermilk. Add sifted flour to first mixture and last of all buttermilk. Beat until smooth and bake in a hot waffle iron. Serve with whipped cream.

HONEY RICE KRISPS
One-half cup sugar.
One-half cup honey.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon vinegar.
One package rice cereal.
Cook sugar and honey, stirring only enough to prevent burning, to a temperature of 270 degrees (hard ball in cold water). Remove from heat; add salt and vinegar. Put rice krispies in large buttered bowl and pour syrup over them, mixing well. While hot, drop by the spoonful into buttered cups or muffin pans, or form into balls. The mixture may be pressed into shallow greased pans and, when cool, cut into bars.
Yield: 20 small balls (about two inches in diameter).

STUFFED BAKED TOMATOES
Six tomatoes.
One cup cooked rice or hominy.
One-half cup cooked string beans.
One-half cup cooked or canned corn.
One-half teaspoon mustard.
Salt and pepper.
Two tablespoons grated cheese.
One-third cup bread crumbs.
Scoop out tomatoes. Chop part removed and combine with rice, string beans and corn. Season with mustard and salt and pepper to taste. Fill tomato cups with this. Combine cheese and crumbs and sprinkle over tomatoes. Bake about 15 minutes in a hot oven or until tomatoes are tender but not soft.

Hot Cocoa.
Cocoa tastes best when the cocoa, sugar and salt are mixed well with the water, and then boiled for from five to 10 minutes before adding the scalded milk, and all heated together.

CREAM OF CHEESE SOUP
Two tablespoons butter.
One tablespoon minced onion.
Two teaspoons minced parsley.
Two teaspoons minced green pepper.
Two tablespoons flour.
Four cups milk.
One-third pound American cheese, grated.
Salt, paprika.
Melt the butter and in it saute the onion, parsley, and green pepper. Blend in the flour, and then gradually add the milk, stirring constantly. Cook until slightly thickened. Then add the grated cheese and continue cooking until smooth and creamy. Season to taste and serve hot. A sprinkle of chopped green pepper or parsley adds color when the soup is served.

To Keep Silver.
Silver kept in a glass jar with camphor gum will stay clean for a long time. The gum, however, should not be allowed to touch the silver as it may make the silver taste of camphor.

Bake Holiday Fruit Cake Now to Age Properly

Slow Baking in Tube Pan Lined With Thicknesses of Heavy Paper Gives Best Results.

It's fruit cake time again if you happen to be one of those housewives who follow Christmas traditions. Fruit cakes for home consumption or fruit cakes to give to some fortunate friends, they have for equals in the pleasant holiday season.

Fruit cake is very rich and therefore is served in smaller pieces and goes farther than other cake. Also, if the cake is aged properly, it becomes more appetizing as time goes on. English families make fruit cakes a year in advance and store and age them very carefully. These cakes have a richness that is not found in the quicker cakes that we bake here.

Fruit cakes should bake very slowly. Some cooks steam the cake for half the baking time and bake for the remainder. A pan of water placed in the oven will help keep the air moist and prevent the cake from drying.

Careful Baking. Tube pans are best for baking the cake since this allows the center to bake as thoroughly as the outer portion. A cake that has not been baked thoroughly will become moldy. Pans should be lined with at least three thicknesses of greased white paper. This keeps the texture of the cake uniform and does not overbake the outside. To keep the top from overbaking cover with a layer of heavy brown paper.

A decorated cake is in keeping with the holiday spirit. Blanched almond petals and candied cherry center make interesting flowers. If you want to carry the realism a bit further you may use bits of angelica for stems and leaves.

To store the cake properly it should be placed in a tight container after it has cooled completely. Sprinkling with fruit juice or brandy or the addition of half an apple from week to week will keep the cake moist and improve its flavor. Here are a number of fruit cake recipes:

Dark Fruit Cake.

Two cups butter.
Two cups sugar.
One six-ounce glass grape jelly.
Twelve eggs, well beaten.
Four and one-half cups soft wheat flour.
Two pounds currants.
Two pounds seeded raisins.
One-half pound crystallized pineapple, dried.
Two tablespoons vanilla extract.
One-half pound cherries, cut in halves.
One pound citron, shredded.
One pound almonds, blanched.
One and one-half pounds pecans, broken.

Two cups sherry or grape juice.
One tablespoon cinnamon.
Two tablespoons allspice.
One-half teaspoon nutmeg.
Two teaspoons cloves.
Prepare fruits, mix and place in large crock. Soak overnight with sherry or grape juice. Sift spices and together three times. Cream butter, add sugar creaming together until light and fluffy. Add jelly and mix thoroughly. Add well beaten eggs and flour alternately, carefully mixing after each addition. Add nuts gradually, distributing them well through the batter. Add fruits, small amount at a time and mix well. Add flavoring. This makes approximately 15 pounds of very stiff batter. Bake in greased and oiled loaf pans. (3 medium) in a slow oven (350 degrees F.) three hours. Allow cakes to cool in the pans.

Moderate Priced Cake.
One-fourth pound of citron cut fine.
One pound of chopped raisins.
One pound of currants.
Two cups of chopped nuts.
Four cups of sifted flour.
One-half pound of butter.
One cup of sugar.
Five eggs.
One-half cup of cider.
One-half cup of tart jelly.
One-half cup of sour cream.
One cup molasses.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon soda.
One teaspoon salt.

Common Sense About Constipation
A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble! Chances are you won't have to look very far if you eat just the things most people eat. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean just a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B₁, and it's not a drug, not a medicine! Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

WONDER FLAKES

Four and one-half cups sifted all-purpose flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon soda.
One teaspoon salt.
Two teaspoons vanilla extract.
One teaspoon lemon extract.
One tablespoon cocoa.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
Rinse raisins, drain, and dry on a towel. Immerse apricots in boiling water and let stand two minutes; drain, dry on a towel, and slice in thin strips with scissors. Rinse citron and cherries, drain and dry on a towel before cutting, and cut cherries into halves. Chop nuts. Cream fat and sugar thoroughly; add well beaten eggs and mix. Add milk alternately with flour sifted with baking powder, soda and salt. Add flavorings and beat well. Measure out two-thirds cup batter and to it add nuts, cocoa and cinnamon, and stir until blended. To remaining batter add fruits and blend. Place on a layer of light batter in a paper-lined tube pan, dot with dark batter and cover with remainder of light batter. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.) about two hours. Test for doneness with cake tester or pick before removing from oven.

Let cool in pan overnight. Sufficient to fill a tube pan nine and one-half inches across top and three and three-fourths inches deep. Weighs about five pounds baked.

Dark Fruit Cake.
One pound seeded raisins.
One-half pound pitted sliced dates.
One-half pound candied citron.
One-fourth pound candied sliced lemon peel.
One-fourth cup sliced candied pineapple.
One-half pound sliced Brazil nuts.

One-fourth cup grape juice, wine or brandy.
Two cups flour.
Three-fourths teaspoon salt.
One and one-half teaspoons cinnamon.
One teaspoon nutmeg.
One teaspoon allspice.
One-half teaspoon mace.
One cup butter or other shortening.
One cup sugar.
Juice of one lemon.
One-fourth cup orange juice.
Wash raisins and currants and drain. Put raisins through food chopper, using coarse blade. Mix dried fruit, candied fruits and nuts. Sift flour with salt and spices and mix with fruit and nut mixture. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, and stir in beaten eggs. Stir in fruit and flour mixture alternately with the liquids and mix well. Pour into pans that have been lined with heavy greased paper and bake in a slow oven (375 degrees) for two to three hours, depending on the size of the cakes. Do not remove paper lining from cake until ready to cut. Yield: six pounds of cake.

Enrich December Menus With Pork and Sausage

icy winter winds—rich pork, or crisp, brown sausage—tart apple sauce. Perhaps this happy association was first discovered by accident. When freezing weather prompted the slaughter of the family pig, a basket of newly gathered apples stood ready to serve up with the roast. Keen cold-weather appetites pronounced the combination ideal, and the "pork and apple sauce" custom became firmly fixed.

And the tart of the apples does make a pleasing flavor contrast with the bland richness of the pork, whether the apples are baked, fried, broiled, glazed, or served up in fancy circles, centered with nuts, raisins, or candied cherries. But modern cooks are no longer bound by the pork-apple tradition for they have learned that many tart fruits will give an excellent flavor "accent" with pork, pineapple, peaches, cranberries, oranges and dried apricots, to mention but a few.

Refrigeration now makes good fresh pork available throughout the year, but it cannot put a winter edge on the appetite. So pork persistently holds its place as a cold-weather favorite.

Pork Plentiful. Market reports bring a note of good cheer to those who especially enjoy fresh pork. There will be more pork on the market this year than there has been for several years. The statisticians tell us that 7,000,000 more pigs were born last spring and summer than in the same season of 1937. And many of these little pigs, grown fat on plenty of good corn and other feed, are now on their way to market. And early winter pigs were born last spring and summer than in the same season of 1937. And many of these little pigs, grown fat on plenty of good corn and other feed, are now on their way to market. And early winter pigs were born last spring and summer than in the same season of 1937. And many of these little pigs, grown fat on plenty of good corn and other feed, are now on their way to market.

And for those who like their pork roasts—or any roasts—done to a turn without a bit of over-cooking, the meat thermometer gives the surest test. Unknown in the home kitchen until a few years ago, meat thermometers now are offered for sale in hardware and equipment stores throughout the country as an investment in satisfactory meat cookery. The bulb of the thermometer goes into the center of the thickest, fleshiest part of the meat. To insert, make a small incision with a skewer or sharp knife in the rind or top fat of the roast and cut short gashes around it with the scissors.

Pork will be done when the center of the roast reaches 180 to 185 degrees Fahrenheit. Today some meat thermometers come plainly marked with the words "pork," "lamb" or "rare beef," thus eliminating any misunderstanding or misreading of blurred figures on the thermometer.

For those who have no thermometers, the general rule to cook pork 25 to 30 minutes to the pound in a moderate oven still holds good, with slight variations. Long, narrow loin roasts will be well done at the center more quickly than thick butts, and boned roasts require more time than those with the bones left in. Test for "doneness" by thrusting a skewer into a thick, fleshy part. If the meat is tender and there is no suggestion of pinkness in the juices, no further cooking is necessary.

Moderate Temperatures. But whatever the test for "doneness"—pork—and other roasts—should be cooked at moderate temperature at least most of the time. Slow cooking makes for tenderness and juiciness in meat, which like other protein foods toughens and shrinks under high temperature.

Constant, moderate roasting temperatures (350 degrees) does the trick nicely for a pork roast. Add no water and no cover. If placed fat side up, the pork roast will be self-basting.

If you seek pork to develop the deeper brown and crispier crust that some people relish, use a slightly lower temperature than for other meats. Sear at 450 to 475 degrees Fahrenheit, and then reduce the heat quickly to 300 or 325 for the remainder of the cooking period.

As for the various cuts, shoulder or butt will give you more meat for your money; but many prefer the flavor and fine grain of the loin, or the greater meatiness of fresh ham.

Strange as it may seem, fresh ham cooks more quickly if the rind is left on. To remove the rind easily after cooking, break through the fleshy side at the hock, then turn the ham over, and lift off in one piece. Fresh ham and shoulder slice more attractively, hot or cold, if they are boned, and boning makes a place for delicious savory stuffing. Roast loin of pork is more easily carved, if the bones are cracked.

Stuffed Chops. Many prefer their pork as chops, richly browned on all surfaces. One favorite combination is "stuffed rib chops with apples." The browned and stuffed chops are topped with the halves of red apples, left unpeeled for color, and baked cut side down on the chops. The resulting

SUCCESSFUL PUDDING REQUIRES SAUCE

Judiciously Used They Enhance Good Qualities of Dessert.

A repertoire of dessert sauces need not be large to be complete. With one or two cold sauces, some of which are hot or tart, a pudding or other dessert may be enhanced. Sauces should be used judiciously and should not mask the goodness of a dessert but should enhance it and bring out some of its hidden qualities.

For a fruity pudding the sauce should be simple and well flavored. For such puddings as "cottage" or other starchy puddings a richer fruit sauce may compensate for the lack of plums and heavy suet.

Yankee Sauce.
One-half cup brown sugar.
Two tablespoons cornstarch.
Two cups water.
One and one-half tablespoons vinegar.

Dash of salt.
Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add water and butter and cook for 10 minutes. Add vinegar. Serve hot. This sauce is especially good with spice puddings.

Custard Sauce.
Two tablespoons sugar.
One tablespoon flour.
Dash of salt.
One egg yolk, well beaten.
One and one-fourth cups milk, scalded.

One-half teaspoon vanilla.
Combine sugar, flour, salt and egg yolk. Add small amount of milk and stir vigorously. Add to remaining milk in double boiler which has been scalded and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Cool. Add vanilla. Makes one and one-half cups sauce.

Cherry Sauce.
One-half cup sugar.
Two tablespoons flour.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Three-fourths cup cherry juice.
One-fourth cup boiling water.
Two teaspoons butter.
One cup pitted, canned red cherries, drained.

Two tablespoons lemon juice.
Combine sugar, flour, salt and add cherry juice and water, mixing thoroughly. Cook over direct heat five minutes, stirring constantly; add butter, cherries and lemon juice. Serve hot. Makes two cups sauce.

Lemon Sauce.
Thoroughly mix one-half cup of sugar with one tablespoon of cornstarch, then add one cup of boiling water, stirring constantly. If the sugar and cornstarch are well blended there is less danger of lumps forming when the water is added. Boil the mixture five minutes, then remove from the heat and add two tablespoons of butter, one and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice, a dash of nutmeg and salt.

Brown Sugar Sauce.
Cream one-third cup of butter and beat in gradually two-thirds of a cup of sifted brown sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Add one teaspoon of vanilla and serve as you serve any hard sauce.

Brandy Sauce.
Blend one tablespoon of flour with one tablespoon of melted butter, add three-fourths of a cup of hot water, three-fourths of a cup of sugar and a pinch of salt and cook until the mixture is transparent. Remove from the heat and add two tablespoons of lemon juice and two tablespoons of brandy. Serve hot on fruit steamed puddings.

Fruit-Nut Sauce.
One-half cup seedless raisins.
One cup apricot nectar.
One-half cup granulated sugar.
Three tablespoons butter.
One tablespoon cornstarch.
Few grains salt.
One-third cup chopped nut meats.
Rinse and drain raisins. Combine nectar, sugar, butter, cornstarch and salt in a saucepan and stir to blend. Bring to a boil and cook and stir until mixture thickens. Add raisins and nuts and continue cooking two or three minutes. Serve hot or cold over puddings. Peach nectar, pear, plum or peach nectar may be substituted for apricot. Sufficient for four to six servings.

STUFFED ONIONS

One quart medium onions.
One cup soft bread crumbs.
One-fourth cup minced ham.
Salt.
Pepper.
Butter.
One-half cup cream.
Parboil onions and remove part of center, leaving the root end intact. Fill cavity with stuffing made with onion pulp, bread crumbs and ham, seasoned with salt and pepper and moistened with melted butter. Place the onions close together in a greased baking dish, pour one-half cup of cream around them and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, until browned about 20 minutes.
In Oriental countries flowers are often added to salads for decoration.

DROP COOKIES

One pound sweet chocolate.
Four cups rice flakes.
One and one-half cups chopped nut meats.
Melt chocolate over hot water. Add rice flakes and nut meats. Mix well and drop by the teaspoon onto buttered or oiled paper. Set in refrigerator to cool. Yield: Four dozen drops (one and one-half inches in diameter).

MEATLESS DISH GOES WELL FOR COMPANY SUPPER

One of the most satisfying meatless dishes that goes well for company supper combines salmon with oysters in individual baking dishes and tops them with flutings of mashed potatoes.

Deep Sea Casserole.
One pound canned salmon.
One-half pint oysters.
One cup medium white sauce.
One cup mashed potatoes.
Salt and pepper.

Arrange alternate layers of salmon and well seasoned white sauce in individual casserole dishes. Place two or three oysters in each casserole. Brush tops with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 15 minutes. Remove from oven and top each casserole with mashed potatoes as desired. Return to oven until potatoes are slightly browned.

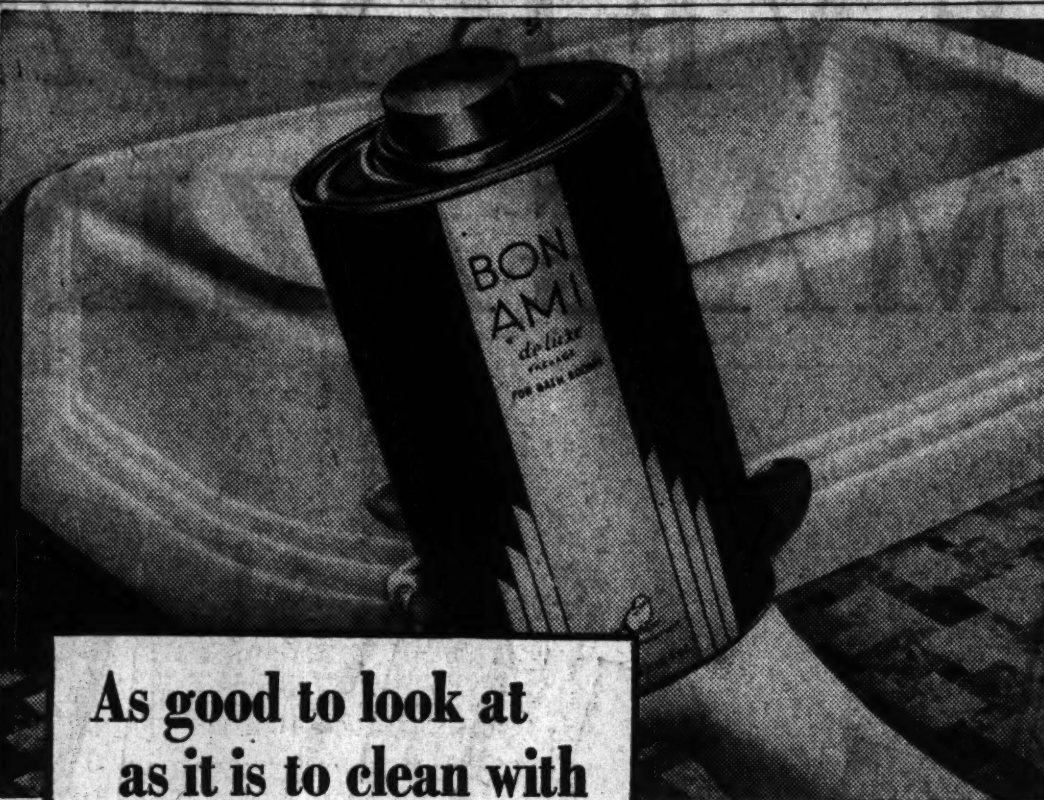

Individual Salad.
Individual gelatin salads made in small paper cups are a smart choice for a community supper. They can be prepared the day before and will save dish-washing.

Child Health.

With one quart of whole milk a day as a foundation for building their diet, the feeding of healthy young children is easy, says a well-known child nutrition specialist.

ALWAYS TENDER AND MEALY

SO WHITE AND FLAKY!

Treat the family—Treat the budget!

SERVE Idaho Russets every day. There are 500 potato recipes. Every one turns out a shining success with Idahos. The reason—Idahos grow in America's ideal potato land—in fertile volcanic Idaho fields where days are sunny and nights are cool. The result—IDAHO RUSSETS cook better, taste better. Baked, they are flaky, mealy, white. Mashed, they are creamy, smooth, fluffy. Fried, they are crisp, crunchy, tender. All ways they have a heartier, richer, fuller-bodied flavor.

DAILY—Millions of women insist on Idahos. They are perfect all the way through, smooth, shallow eyed. There's less waste—more downright goodness in every pound. Always ask for—

Idaho Russet POTATOES

Stuffed Idaho Potato
Scrub, dry, Idaho Russets. Bake in quick (60°) oven until tender when pinched, (about 30 min.). Cut thin slice one side, scoop out potato—mash with butter, hot milk, seasoning. Fill potato shell with creamed meat, eggs, or beef cubes in beef gravy. Fill on mashed potato—cover with butter until golden brown. Serve.

Steamed Idaho Sweet Spanish Onions
Peel (under water is easier) Idaho Sweet Spanish Onions; boil in salted water until clear and tender. Drain. Brush with butter; serve immediately.

Chef of Idaho Soup
Slice thin 6 Idaho Sweet Spanish Onions. Sauté in 3 tablespoons butter until clear and yellow. Add 1 qt. milk. Cook 2½ cups diced Idaho Russet Potatoes in salted water until tender (about 10 min.). Blend 2 tablespoons butter with 1½ tablespoons flour over flame; add to milk. Add potatoes; cook all until soft and thick. Season, serve.

PLANE MAN HELD ON ESPIONAGE CHARGE

Los Angeles Employe Accused of Trying to Sell Military Secrets to Japan.

The Associated Press, Dec. 1.—A 21-year-old worker, was arrested on a Federal indictment charging him of attempting to pass on to Japanese officials confidential construction plans for the Douglas Aircraft Corp. The youth, son of D. W. Drummond, is accused of attempting to sell $200,000 worth of confidential construction plans for the Douglas Aircraft Corp. to Japanese officials.

The indictment alleges Drummond stole 150 photographs and 15 blueprints of a new plane from the Northrop plant in Torrance, Calif., and tried to sell these, together with confidential construction plans, to Japanese officials.

The theft, it was asserted, took place last May, a year after the youth was hired in the advertising department of Northrop.

In turn, a Japanese Government agent, a member of a Japanese buying commission, and Los Angeles Japanese attorney were approached, it is alleged, to purchase the plans, but they were turned down.

Drummond also is accused of passing blueprints of an experimental bomber not yet off drawing boards, and boarding a Japanese freighter in San Francisco harbor May 25 in an attempt to take them.

He assertedly was told to return at a later date, when a Japanese agent would be aboard who would be interested, but he did not return.

In his sales campaign in Los Angeles, the indictment said, Drummond gave one Japanese official an opportunity to study the confidential blueprints at his leisure, without closing the deal.

Federal agents said Drummond was a native of Hurley, Idaho, admitted on probation from a burglary charge.

Several other arrests were made, it is said, but they were not the only alleged participants in the espionage scheme.

Northrop, for years, has been noted almost exclusively for manufacture of military aircraft.

PRESIDENT PLANS TO READ MESSAGE TO NEW CONGRESS

These include that of chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor, John J. O'Connor of New York, and Joseph Sabath of Illinois is ranked second on that committee, with names on what measures are to be taken up on the House floor.

New Surgeon-General in Cabinet

Sitting in the back seat of President's car were Captains I. J. Callaghan and John T. McInerney, whose promotion to Surgeon-General with rank of Major General became effective today. Just before taking his leave from the White House, Roosevelt turned to the two men and suggested, with a smile, that the Speaker ought to sweat the new Surgeon-General.

Roosevelt accepted an invitation to have lunch at the United States Marine Club near here.

The new relief budget, unofficially estimated to involve up to another $1,000,000,000, was scheduled for a second conference between the President and Harry Hopkins, WPA Administrator.

While William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, is expected to leave for Paris, the diplomat said in Miami, Fla., en route from a vacation in the Bahamas, there was "no story" about the trip.

He added he was coming at the invitation of Roosevelt and would talk with him "about anything" he wanted to talk about. Observers felt he may discuss, among other things, French labor troubles.

Frank C. Walker of New York, former director of the National Emergency Council, was on Roosevelt's calling list, but his visit was described as largely personal.

Other Legislative Proposals

The new Congress is expected to be asked either by the administration or others to:

- Adopt higher taxes on undistributed corporate profits and capital gains, both of which were slashed last session and became law without the President's signature.
- Re-enact some expiring nuisance laws, and provide for reciprocal trade agreements with states of public employees' salaries and tax-exemption.
- Liberalize and extend the Social Security Act.
- Pass further crop control legislation.
- Put through long-sought legislation to put the roads on a sounder financial footing.
- Adopt revisions of the Neutrality Act.
- Amend the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Whether the President will again get through a Government reorganization bill is not certain, although his last statement on the subject indicated he would.

Several weeks ago he pointed out the need for a revision of court procedure by an expert congressional commission, subject to a congressional veto which might place, as a policy that might be followed in delegating authority for reorganization of the governmental machinery.

of Trying to Sell Military Secrets to Japan.

Los Angeles, Dec. 1.—Karl Drummond, 21-year-old aircraft worker, was arrested last night on a Federal indictment accusing him of attempting to sell to Japan the design of a new type of aircraft.

The youth, son of D. W. Drummond, a prominent Los Angeles attorney, is accused of attempting to sell to Japan, through a Japanese agent, 100,000 photographs of United States army and navy airplanes in various stages of construction and the documents relating to the construction of aircraft, embodying closely-guarded secrets of defense.

The indictment alleges that Drummond sold 150 photographs and 15 blueprints of a new aircraft to a Japanese agent in the Los Angeles office of the Aircraft Corporation and tried to sell these, together with confidential construction plans, to Japanese officials.

The thefts, it was asserted, started last May, a year after the youth was hired in the advertising department of Northrop.

In turn, a Japanese Government military, a member of a Japanese spy-buying commission, and a Los Angeles Japanese attorney, who was approached, it is alleged, by Drummond, turned down the overtures.

Drummond also is accused of making blueprints of an experimental bomber not yet off the drawing boards, and boarding a Japanese freighter in San Pedro harbor May 25 in an attempt to get them.

He allegedly was told to return to a later date, when a Japanese would be aboard who would be interested, but he did not try again.

In his sales campaign in Los Angeles, the indictment said, the youth gave one Japanese official an opportunity to study the aircraft blueprints at his leisure, without closing the deal.

Federal agents said Drummond admitted that he had been working on probation from a burglary charge.

Several other arrests were forecast, it is believed, but that the youth was not the only alleged participant in the espionage scheme.

Drummond, for years, has been dependent almost exclusively to the manufacture of military aircraft.

Held for Secrets Theft

By the Associated Press.
NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 1.—The New Jersey Chamber of Commerce and a group of corporation lawyers opened an attack today on the attempts of cities to collect taxes on the intangible assets of more than 150 national corporations which have registered offices in this State.

Three large cities alone have made late-minute claims for almost a third of a billion dollars in taxes on more than five billion dollars in personal property valuations for 1937 and 1938.

State Chamber President Robert T. Bowman said in a statement that the corporations and their lawyers are responsible and reckless in the administration of the personal property tax laws by municipal governments, with attendant indiscriminate increasing of the tax load on personal property, will ruin New Jersey as an industrial State.

He said the chamber was "prepared to take steps to safeguard the interests of New Jersey business and New Jersey employes."

A group of New York and New Jersey corporation lawyers studied a suggestion that the Federal courts be asked to enjoin the levies as a violation of the personal property tax laws by municipal governments.

When the deadline for filing 1937 tax claims passed last midnight, the latest figures available on the claims for 1937 and 1938 were:

Jersey City—Total of $199,974,804.44 in taxes sought on a combined valuation of $4,982,881,064 against 135 corporations.

Newark—Total of $25,945,580 in taxes sought on a combined valuation of $648,639,000 against 20 corporations.

Paterson—Total of $8,600,000 in taxes sought for 1937 on valuation of $74,000,000 against two corporations.

Camden and other cities had acted previously.

Officials of Mayor Frank Hague's Jersey City administration said the claims represented "fair taxation on the intangible property represented by these corporation agencies which have offices in Jersey City under their plan to escape taxation in New York."

PRICE OF HAY STOPS TRIAL

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 1.—J. B. Galloway, testifying in an estate partition suit, quoted the current price of hay at $9 a ton.

His statement halted proceedings. Judge Sarah T. Hughes, Texas' only woman District Judge, stepped from the bench, conferred with the merchant and purchased 40 bales of hay for her riding horse.

A decree by the royal and president Governor of Bucovina, Province of day prohibited the use of the Yiddish language in public places.

Authorities said the order was issued to protect the large Jewish population of Carnaul, in Northern Rumania, where a recent day, a synagogue and other buildings were set afire in anti-Jewish demonstrations.

The Governor stated that hearing Yiddish spoken would provoke the Christian population further.

The decree specifically forbade the use of Yiddish (a dialect spoken by many Jews primarily in Eastern Europe) in public and private offices, factories and stores.

Punishment for the first violation is three days in jail; for the second violation, 10 days; and for the third, closing the premises where the violations occurred.

Some Jews, it was said, master no other language, but the decree said that "persons who use Yiddish prove they are not Rumanians."

Only German Press Comment Hails Codreanu as Hero.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Westfaelische Landeszeitung, only German newspaper to comment on the killing of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, leader of the Rumanian Iron Guard, hailed him today as a martyr and hero.

"died as he lived—fearlessly, unflinchingly. . . . A hundred times he could have found ways to place himself in safety but he scorned to do so. . . . Rememberance and reverence, like flaming torches, will forever burn beside this hero's nameless grave."

These steps were counted as the price of Rightist parliamentary support. Communists, Socialists and labor unions had been generally credited with balking representation in insurgent Spain and insisting on continued bonds with the Soviet Union.

One thing that was believed to have deterred Daladier from such action in the past was fear that these groups could make an effective general strike in protest.

Owner Reports Watches and Clothes Taken From Parked Auto.

The theft of 150 sample watches and several bags of clothing from an automobile parked in the 1900 block of Locust street was reported last night by R. Ted Frank, New York jewelry salesman. He valued the watches at $1000 and the clothing at $150.

Frank said he had parked his car in order to register at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. When he returned to the machine a short time later he found one of the windows had been smashed.

STOCK LIST PRICES DRIFT IRREGULARLY DOWNWARD

Selling of Steels Chills Market; Leaders Off Fractions to Point or So; Rails, Utilities, Specialties Resistant.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Selling of steels chilled today's stock market and leaders declined fractions to a point or so. Rails, utilities and specialties resisted, but the list moved irregularly lower. Efforts to revive buying met with faint response. Closing quotations, however, were above the day's bottoms in many cases.

The ticker loosed the greater part of the time. Transfers totaled under 1,000,000 shares. Profit taking on yesterday's upward run, in addition to further shifts for income tax adjustment brokers said, were contributory market handicaps. Wall street, on the whole, however, seemed to retain a portion of the cheer inspired by the collapse of the French protest strike, and the general run of business news, while stressing flat-trending tendencies in many trade fields, was not particularly cheerless.

Movement by Groups.
Consistent buyers' groups included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber and General Electric.

Resistant were N. Y. Shipbuilding, Loft, Dunhill, Monsanto Chemical, U. S. Gypsum, Phelps Dodge, International Telephone, Southern Railway, Pullman and Texas Corporation.

Bonds did better than stocks. Sterling backed away in the forenoon, after its uptick yesterday, but recovered later. At mid-afternoon it was off 1/4 of a cent at $4.68 1/2. The French franc was up .00116 of a cent at 2.62 1/2-1/2.

Reaction to the News.
Retarding the news was estimates that steel operations during the past two weeks have been running ahead of orders. It was recognized the forthcoming holidays would cut into both bookings and output for the steelmakers, although most of them looked for the operating rate to hold around 50 per cent of capacity at the spring, with a pickup likely in the work.

Falls generally maintained their balance in the face of a decrease predicted for last week's freight loadings. Action of the I. C. C. after yesterday's close in approving retention of the higher bituminous coal rates, scheduled to expire at the end of the year, was considered favorable.

Power and light company stocks were bolstered as the result of more holding corporations in this line submitting integration plans to the SEC under the Holding Company Act. The deadline for filing of integration intentions expires at mid-night.

Noted by Market Analysts.
Noted was the summary of the Engineering News-Record indicating construction awards for the current week would total the same as last week's, at $1,000,000,000. While total awards for the current week down 8 per cent from the preceding month, the aggregate was the best for any November since 1929 and was ahead of the corresponding month last year by 81 per cent.

Recovery proponents derived some comfort from Stock Exchange figures disclosing that the November decline in quoted prices was accompanied by a sizeable drop in the number of shares traded.

The turnover last month amounted to 27,922,953 shares against 41,553,470 in October and 29,254,626 in November a year ago.

The Securities Commission at Washington reports these transactions by customers with odd-lot dealers or specialists on the New York Stock Exchange for Nov. 30: 4088 purchases, involving 115,912 shares; 5144 sales, involving 132,774 shares.

Selling orders of small traders on the stock exchange in the week ended Nov. 26 exceeded buying orders. The commission reported customers' odd-lot orders to sell totaled 23,272, involving 608,987 shares valued at $18,001,407. This compared with 20,424 orders to buy, involving 572,923 shares valued at $18,647,128.

Curb Expansion Move.
Constitutional changes desired to broaden the business done on the floor of the New York Curb Exchange, the nation's second largest security market, through an increase in associate members, were submitted today to the curb membership for approval. The changes in rules, approved yesterday by the Board of Governors, would:

Enable New York City firms not members of the Stock Exchange to become Curb associates.
Cut the initiation fee on regular Curb membership for associates from $2500 to $2000.

Harvest of associate memberships have been limited to Stock Exchange firms.
Curb officials expressed belief the changes would attract to the Curb considerable business now handled off the Exchange in the "over-the-counter" market. Any

CHICAGO DETECTIVE SHOT BY CONVICT DIES

Edward Lynn Victim of Escaped Missouri Felon Who Also Was Killed.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Detective Edward Lynn died yesterday of a bullet wound in the head suffered in a fight with James Wood, convict escaped from the Booneville (Mo.) reformatory, who was killed.

Lynn and Sgt. Allen Mulvey were called to a tavern after Tom Williams, the owner, learned Wood was carrying a revolver. Wood was doing at the bar. Lynn sought to rouse him. Wood whisked his weapon from an under-arm holster and fired. Lynn fell, a bullet through his head. Mulvey fired six shots from his own revolver and then emptied Lynn's before Wood toppled with six bullets in his body.

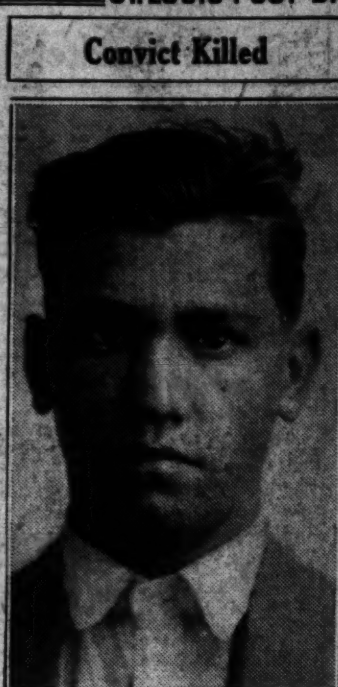

Wood was serving a seven-year sentence for attempted robbery from St. Louis County when he fled from the reformatory at Booneville last July 31.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly, after being informed that Wood had escaped twice from Missouri penal institutions, said:

"How can Chicago policemen protect themselves against mad criminals turned loose by other states? Lynn died a martyr to his duty. He would still be alive if Missouri had done its duty."

Referring to Wood as the lowest type of professional criminal, the Mayor added:

"We cannot help it that criminals congregate here. Chicago is the crossroads of the nation. But there are too many of them coming here through lax administration elsewhere." The Mayor's remarks were made at a meeting of the City Council.

JAMES WOOD.
WHO was shot and killed in a fight with Chicago detective yesterday. He escaped in July from Missouri State Penitentiary, where he was serving a seven-year robbery sentence.

MISSOURI WAGE-HOUR ACT URGED BY OFFICIAL

Labor Commissioner Cites Plant That Paid $5.50 for 12 Days' Work.

By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1.—Enactment of a State wage-hour law by the next Legislature was urged today by Mrs. Mary Edna Cruzen, Labor Commissioner, in her annual report.

The recent shift of several industries from cities to small communities has presented a labor problem especially serious regarding women employees, the report says.

Missouri's nine-hour law for women applies only to communities of 3000 and more population, with the result that "women employees in smaller towns are required to work long hours."

"We are powerless to take any action because of the exemption," Mrs. Cruzen said "serious social problems" followed the establishment of factories "in some instances." She cited one plant where some classes of workers had received $5.50 for 12 days' work and the top wage for skilled labor was $15 a week.

While the Federal wage-hour law now applies to most factories in the State, there still is need of a State law for intrastate business, Mrs. Cruzen said. She recommended removal of population limit provisions of labor laws.

More violations of the women's nine-hour law were reported in 1937 than of any other State labor statute.

Wood's Criminal Record; Sentenced for Midland Bank Robbery.
Wood was sentenced to seven years in the Missouri penitentiary on March 24, 1937, in connection with the attempted robbery in 1931 of the old Midland Savings Bank, 6135 Page boulevard. He engaged in a revolver fight with Gregory L. Dowling, vice-president of the bank, and was wounded. Dowling, himself wounded, killed Wood's companion, Bennie Bethel, a former convict.

Wood escaped from City Hospital and was a fugitive until Jan. 8, 1934, when he was arrested in Ohio and sent to Leavenworth penitentiary on a Dyer Act conviction. He was taken to St. Louis County on completion of the Federal sentence.

He had served previous sentences in the Missouri penitentiary and at Booneville.

He first came to the attention of police here as a member of a gang of young hoodlums who congregated near Twenty-fifth and Howard streets. He had been arrested many times for investigation, but his police record in St. Louis ended with his escape from the hospital.

Deputies Believe, After All-Night Search, Benny and Estelle Dickson Have Gone North.

By the Associated Press.
EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Dec. 1.—Highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and Federal agents swarmed near Twenty-fifth and Howard streets in this area during the night, but found no trace of Benny and Estelle Dickson.

Sixteen deputy sheriffs gave up the search for the pair, charged with two South Dakota bank robberies and wanted in connection with others in Michigan and Indiana, but highway patrolmen and Federal agents still cruised about today.

Deputies expressed the belief the Dicksons had swung north after leaving here and were headed for Minnesota, where Dickson has relatives. The Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Des Moines, Ia., last night broadcast a warning the couple might be traveling across Western Iowa.

Case Records of a PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Of Northwestern University

IT IS probably more important that customers remember the name of the salesman than that he remember their names, as this case today will illustrate.

Case K-164: Clyde G., aged 23, is a student in my course on the Psychology of Advertising and Selling.

"I've been in the office of my company for the last two years," he volunteered after class one evening, "but now I've got a chance to go out on the road as a salesman. A few weeks ago you talked about how to improve one's memory. It seems to me it would be invaluable for a salesman to remember his customer's name, so I wonder if you would repeat some of the things you recommended that day."

DIAGNOSIS: In Case K-164, I discussed some of these principles three weeks ago, and offered you readers my educational bulletin on HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR MEMORY.

IF A CUSTOMER is to have enough confidence in Clyde to give him an order, then the customer must be made to feel that Clyde is an old friend. But if he cannot call Clyde by name, this illusion of long time familiarity and friendship cannot be developed.

How can Clyde educate his customer to use his name freely? By the law of repetition. But how can we repeat our own names frequently without seeming to be guilty of self-advertising? By weaving direct discourse into our sales talk. For example, Clyde can say, "The other day I was talking to Mr. Brown of the Crawford Publishing Co., and he said to me, 'Clyde, you show me how I can make money by shifting to your brand of merchandise and I'll give you an order.'"

A little later in the sales interview, Clyde can deftly slip in another instance of direct discourse, as by saying, "That's the same point that Mr. Smith brought out last week, when he said, 'Clyde, how can you sell at a lower price than your competitor?'"

POLITICIANS AND ALL those people who are popular, have employed this same method of introducing and re-introducing their names into the conversation until they have taught their "public" to remember them. By employing the tactful method I have just described, every reader can do the same even in social circles. It is good strategy from both a business as well as a social angle.

While teaching people your own name, however, be sure to employ the psychological rules I described three weeks ago for memorizing the names of your associates. Then you'll profit doubly. And if you are dealing with people in groups or engaged in sales work, be doubly sure to teach other people your own name by the deft use of direct discourse, as outlined above.

Nerve Disorders

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

ONCE a nerve cell is destroyed it can never be replaced. Nerve cells are highly specialized and it is a general rule that the more highly specialized a cell is, the less likely it is to regenerate. A cell or, indeed a thousand cells of the skin on the back of your hand can be destroyed and the intact cells at the side of the cut or burn will multiply and fill in the gap. But destroy a group of nerve cells and the surrounding cells do not divide and replace them. They have too much work of their own to do.

There is an analogy to this in society. A thousand ditch diggers might be destroyed by a flood; the next day a thousand others would take their place. But remove an Einstein or an H. L. Mencken and the loss is permanent.

THIS FACT MAKES diseases of the nervous system tragic and difficult. In infantile paralysis, for instance, if during the acute attack some cells in the spinal cords are destroyed, they are never replaced, and the paralysis of the muscles to which they send fibers is permanent.

Two things can happen to any cell or group of cells in the body. Their activity can be lowered or it can be raised. Both things happen to the cells of the nervous system in marked degree.

To the motor cells, lowered activity means paralysis, heightened activity tremor of the muscles or convulsions, as in epilepsy. To the sensory cells, lowered activity means numbness, while heightened activity means painful sensations without cause, such as neuralgia. To the cells of the intellectual area, lowered activity means sleep or melancholia, while heightened activity means delirium or mania.

ALL NERVOUS disorders can be thought of in this way. The causes which operate to produce these results are numerous. The nervous system is especially susceptible to drugs. Some depress, some excite. Morphine is used to quiet nervous activity. Alcohol, to a certain extent, excites and then depresses. These drugs apparently exert their influence directly on the nerve cell. That is why they are habit-forming. Largely why, at least. I have seen a great many articles lately discussing that great American disease, alcoholism, as if it were all a question of personality—a psychological problem. Much more than that, it is a chemical problem—the need of the nerve cell to be saturated.

Other causes of nervous disorders are infections and tumors. Infections, such as infantile paralysis just mentioned, paralyze and encephalitis can be treated and brought to a successful termination, but with some loss of function due to destruction of nerve cells. Great advance has been made in the early recognition and treatment of tumors of the central nervous system.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU—By Bob Burns

THE best way to look ahead is to look back and see what's happened before. The reason scientists know where a star is going to be a year from today is because they have traced the record of that star back for hundreds of years.

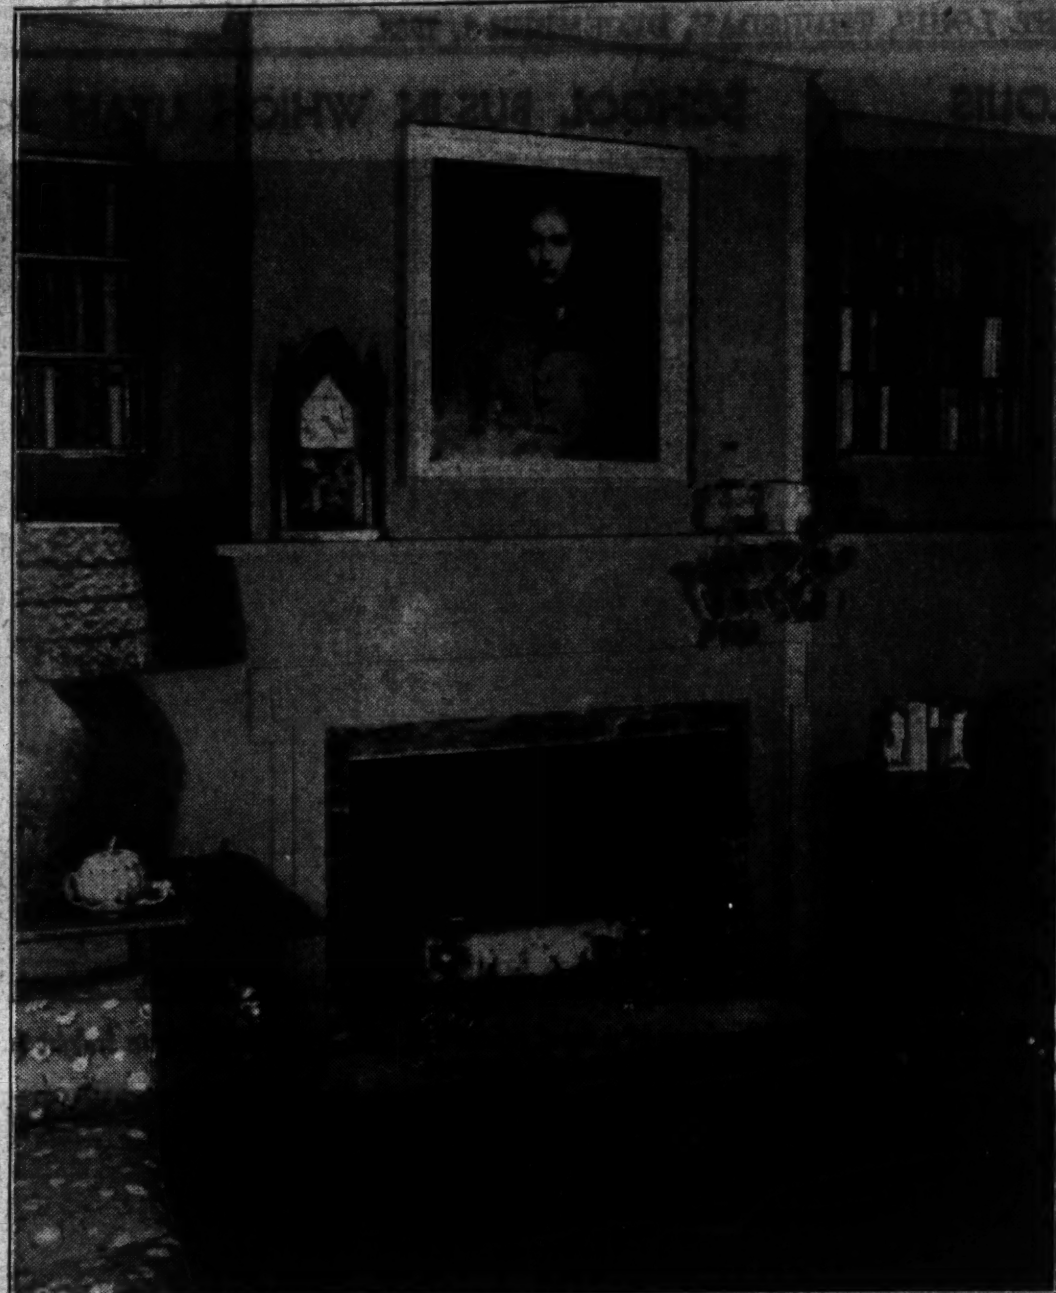

I see now where a scientist has traced the habits of people back for generations and generations, and has finally figured what is going to happen to the next generation. He says, "They'll grow up, get a job, fall in love, get married, have children and start worryin' about what's going to happen to the next generation."

NEW IDEAS IN MANTELS

THE FIREPLACE WALL OF THIS ROOM IS PAINTED IN A SOFT, LIGHT GRAY, THOUGH THE REST OF THE WALLS ARE WHITE. THE MANTEL ARRANGEMENT IS NEW AND INTERESTING AND PROVIDES A CHANGE FROM THE USUAL SYMMETRICAL BALANCE.

By Elizabeth Boykin

SOME like them hot, some like them cold. In short everybody likes fireplaces of some description—whether they're real or artificial. The best decorators approve of fake mantels for two good reasons—first, they give a pleasant focal point to the room around the hearth, a heart is a symbolic center of family life and so it's right and proper to cherish it. Of course, a real fire is nice, however, and lucky is the woman who has one. Her furnishing problem is half solved.

But if the fireplace itself doesn't go out of fashion, mantels have a way of getting very dated indeed. So the first thing to think about in planning to do over a room is what to do about the mantel. Far too often we decide to "let it go." Yet it's the center of the scene and if it's all out of style, the room hasn't a chance, no matter how much you spend on new furniture or fine curtains. In other words, this is the place to begin your rejuvenation.

And there is no dearth of ideas. I don't know when I've seen so many really new ways of doing over old mantels. Some are extreme, but don't show your age by snubbing them. Daring unusual ideas in decoration aren't practical for everybody, but they'll jog us out of the rut we're apt to settle into. If your ideas are young, unexpected and exciting about the new mantels, even if you can't copy them exactly.

The most unusual effect I've seen with a window grouping on another wall. The white portion of the wall was framed with dull green damask draperies and finished across the top with a cornice of white painted wood and mirror. This, remember, in a room with black walls! But don't blame me—I'm just your reporter describing the news.

Small fire openings framed with narrow mirror moldings are seen here, there and everywhere. They do without mantel shelf too but set into a wall that is entirely covered with a mural. If you have an artistic member of the family, why not give him (or her) a chance with your fireplace wall. Flip out the old mantel and plaster up all the wall except the small opening and have a mural in serious or amusing vein. The most interesting mural would be one that depicts early history of your community or an episode in the story of your family. A decorative family tree could be quite something, or an illustrated map. Or if the family is athletic, why not an athletic mural. If there's no one available who's up to the job of painting a mural, there are always unusual wall papers that might be just a little overwhelming if used for all four walls would be handsome on just the fireplace wall.

I was pretty startled myself at the mantel in a room with dusky black walls. But yet I rather liked it when I got my breath. The mantel with mirror molding set in a panel of the wall that was painted white—a space about the width of double windows and balanced in fact with a window grouping on another wall. The white portion of the wall was framed with dull green damask draperies and finished across the top with a cornice of white painted wood and mirror. This, remember, in a room with black walls! But don't blame me—I'm just your reporter describing the news.

To get more down to earth—one of the pleasantest mantels I've seen gains its distinction by its asymmetrical arrangement, that is by studiously not balancing the various elements in the composition. Thus a fine old clock stood on one side instead of in the exact center as you'd expect—this takes a fine Italian hand to do just right but lends a lot of smart distinction. This particular room was furnished in a fine honey-toned maple with green and copper tones predominating in the upholstery. The rug was green and the lamps in copper. Pictures then how distinguished the fireplace wall looked painted entirely in gray, with the other walls in white.

Sometimes a plain painted fireplace wall gains interest if you paint a stencil design of leaves or vines to frame the mantel. Here again—a wall paper border is a good substitute if you're not much of a hand for such work. One of the most attractive fireplace designs I've seen for many a moon was in a room with deep green walls. The fireplace panel was white all the way to the ceiling with a group of plaster brackets spaced formally to hold terra cotta figures.

THE SINGING ATHLETE

By Inez Robb

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.

EQUIPPED with a diaphanous gown of scarlet tulle, Alice Marble, 25, national women's tennis champion, is prepared to make her debut as a café singer in the sort room of the Waldorf-Astoria tonight. The gown was chosen by the fair-haired, green-eyed queen of American tennis herself, one lady athlete who is a sight for sore eyes.

When Miss Marble dons the scarlet gown tonight, she will be further proof that lady athletes can be glamorous girls and not, of necessity, muscle molls. She will also be taking the first note in what she fondly hopes will be a radio career.

"If I were a good singer, I'd be called a contralto," she said with becoming modesty, "I love to sing and it's really fun."

Although the California pippin has always sung for her own amusement, Miss Marble had no voice lessons until a year ago. Then Carol Lombard, one of her good friends, paid for a dozen lessons with the Russian singer and teacher, Nina Koshetz of Hollywood.

Not only is Miss Lombard one of Alice Marble's favorite persons, but Clark Gable, who is one of Miss Lombard's good friends, is also the tennis star's favorite Hollywood actor.

"She's a grand friend and a fine person," said Miss Marble, who denied emphatically and categorically that she was in love or had been in love.

"Of course I like to go to dinner and the theater with men," she said. "Let me see. I guess the last man I was out with was Don Budge. He took me to the hockey game a few nights ago."

Although Budge has just signed a $75,000 contract to turn pro, Miss Marble doesn't think any such temptation ever will come her way.

"Women tennis players aren't sufficiently spectacular to appeal to the crowd," she believes.

Miss Marble is happy to be the amateur tennis champion in her field. She's definitely going to Wimbledon next spring, although in the past she's never had much luck in this classic English tournament.

Singing for her supper in a night club by no means jeopardizes her amateur standing in the tennis world. Julian Myrick, proxy of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, has sent her a telegram wishing her every success and including a pious hope that she ends up in the Metropolitan Opera.

Popular ballads, not torch songs or swing, are the net queen's singing matter. "I'm a quiet singer, not a speedy one at all," she said when asked if her song delivery matched her fast and furious pace on the tennis court.

Although screen tests have been most successful, Miss Marble prefers radio to a screen career. A Hollywood job is "a full-time business. It wouldn't leave me any time to practice tennis. But singing is different."

She practices every day at swank court house while in New York.

"How come your muscles don't bulge?" the slim, extremely feminine-looking Alice was asked.

"Oh, I'm just lucky," she replied. "In tennis, it's looseness of muscle, not heat, that counts."

So she will look slim and supple as she will look when she sings debut. And her complexion will be as pink and white as you please. She's had her face "shelled" (it used to be known as peeling) and not a trace of sunburn is left.

"Miss Marble, you're lucky enough to combine both athletic prowess and beauty. But if you had to choose between being a typical lady athlete and a glamorous girl, which would you rather be?" she was asked.

"Goodness," she said after wrinkling her brow for 30 seconds, "that's a question I simply can't answer."

Sensitive Child Suffers Under Public Display

Teachers Should Understand and Excuse Them From Lone Appearances.

By Angelo Patri

CHILDREN are really courageous. Often a child performs heroically, within the silence of his own spirit, while the rest of us look on critically, never knowing the struggle the child has made, never glimpsing the agony of spirit he endures, nor the triumph of his victory. Yet every classroom witness such heroic efforts every day. If the teacher only could be conscious of them.

A child wrote a note, and because it is like many others I am giving the gist of it here. "We have a singing teacher who comes to school once a week to teach us singing. He makes us stand up and sing alone, before all the others, without any accompaniment. I sit and shiver and shake, hoping he won't call on me. It has gotten so bad that now I lie awake at night worrying about the next time he comes and how I shall manage if he calls on me. I can't sleep and it gives me an awful feeling in the pit of my stomach. I can't sing much. My voice won't go above the second C. And I don't carry a tune well, either. This thing has sure got me down. What am I going to do?"

Think of that child, when the teacher calls on her and says "Sing that verse through." She tries to sing and her voice sticks in her throat. The other children look at her sympathetically for the most part, a few grinning gleefully. The classroom teacher looks worried. She wants everybody to show well, and this child is so shy. Why can't she shake it off?

The singing teacher, pressed for time, certain that this individual singing is of first importance—though why he should have such a notion is beyond me and the child—impatiently marks time and says, "Try that again. Open your mouth, wide; let your breath come freely. Don't squeeze a tone like that. Look at me. Now sing."

Nobody knows the effort that child makes to stand there, forcing herself to make a sound. Nobody knows the turmoil of spirit she is enduring, the panic that is rushing down upon her as she calls for the help to fall and cover her. And to what purpose?

Sensitive children, and there are many of them in a class, find it difficult to sing alone in class. Like telling their names out loud before a group of strangers, it seems to center the eyes of the critical world upon their favored minds. The strain is terrific and unjustified by any results it brings.

Teachers usually know which of the pupils have these feelings and attitudes. They usually try to spare such children useless pain. When visiting teachers come—the specialists who usually teach subjects and ignore children—the teacher may well protect these children and ignore the stranger within the gates that they are excused from public exhibitions. No good comes of pressing such children, but much harm is likely to be done. Let them alone.

Angelo Patri has prepared a special booklet (No. 301) entitled, "Obedience," in which he tells parents how to cope with the difficult problems of disobedience. Send for it, enclosing 10 cents. Address your request to: Angelo Patri, The Bell Library, care St. Louis Post-Dispatch, 247 West Forty-third street, New York, N. Y.

No Marks From Pictures Pictures that hang on the wall should have a thumb tack placed in each lower corner next to the wall. This will hold the picture away from the wall and prevent the marks on the paper that prevent our changing pictures around every so often.

Stain Removers. One household has a cardboard on which she has pasted tips on how to remove various stains and other laundry data. She has shelved the whole surface and it hangs in her laundry to be right on hand when needed.

Use of Names — By Emily Post

DEAR Mrs. Post: I was married some years ago and my husband died. I want back to business and continued to use his name both in business and in private life. Then I married again. I still continued to use my first husband's name in business because it was by this name that I had become known in business. Now I've been divorced. May I discard my second husband's name entirely and use my first husband's name socially as well as in my business? I can't tell you how much I would like to do this.

Answer: I don't know what the local ruling upon this may be, but I do know of more than a score of cases where this exact thing has been done. Many of those who have taken back their first husband's names have done so for business reasons as in your own case. The most typical case is that of the woman whose children are those of her first husband and she naturally preferred to have the same name as theirs.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you tell me how mother (a widow) and I (a spinster living with her) should have our Christmas cards printed. We want to have one card printed with both names and nothing too formal.

Answer: Since you evidently do not want to use the formal "Mrs. John Brown and Miss Mary Brown wish you a Merry Christmas, etc.," you might have your signatures printed at the end of the greeting. "Sara Brown and Mary Brown."

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a middle-aged widow intending to marry soon. My fiancé wants me to meet his children, who are all married and living in the same town, but not in this town where both he and I make our homes. None of his children has a spare room so that they could invite me to stay with them. He thinks it will be all right for me to stay at the hotel where I shall certainly be more comfortable and that he can be put up at one of their houses or else stay in the hotel, too. None of his family has written to me since they were told about our engagement, nor have they sent me any invitation so I have no way of knowing—except from what their father tells me—that they approve of our marriage. I would like to please him, and to meet his children, and yet I have a curious feeling that such arrangements may place me in a questionable position. Will you tell me how you feel about this situation and what you would advise me to do.

Answer: It would be best, of course, if his children could go to where you live. But if they have families that cannot be left and you are only one to make the journey, it would be quite all right for you to go—if some gesture of welcome is first made by them.

IF YOU ASK My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Mrs. Carr: MAY I please try to lend you a little help? Lately, I have noticed several letters from young brides who are having some troubles with cooking, food budgets, etc. I have found several cook books put out by companies who advertise certain products. These books are very good, in fact sometimes better than those one can buy in stores. All of them consider food economy; so I am sending you a separate list in case it will help. Young brides, and old ones, too, will profit by listening to the radio programs.

Dear Mrs. Carr: WILL YOU please ask if any of your correspondents will let me know if any church has used the cantata, "Song and Star," at Christmas-time? If so, would they be kind enough to lend us the copies? Thank you. Sincerely yours, MARIE WILLIAMS, 1923 Wyoming. Vice-President of Choir, South Side Baptist Church.

Dear Martha Carr: I AM WRITING TO YOU, hoping you may be able to help me solve a problem which means very much. My father beats me terribly, although I am 19 years old, for such things as going into the icebox, and scolds me for the smallest reasons. He doesn't buy me any clothes, but wants to boss me. The problem is, could he do anything to me if I should leave home? I am tired of beatings and scoldings. I know I could do better if I could move. I will not sign my full name, because I do not suppose it is necessary. Please answer. V. M. C.

If you leave home, your father may make trouble for you, as you will not be of legal age until you are 21. If he is constantly abusing you without cause, you might present the matter to the Juvenile Court, or have some older friend do this, and find out the quietest and best procedure to follow.

My Dear Mrs. Carr: I WANT A Catholic Bible very much and cannot pay the price the book stores ask. Perhaps you know where I can get one by paying the postage and a small sum (50 cents). I shall deeply appreciate your help in this. I should like a comfortable print as I must use glasses and read at night. I live in a small place. I read your column constantly and you surely must do a world of good. P. B.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I AM A registered nurse and would like some information about where I may put in my application for the position of nurse or hostess on some railroad train. Thanking you in advance. DAILY READER.

You can find out what roads use this service by making inquiries at the downtown railroad offices; most of them are located so closely together that it will not be much of a trip.

Dear Mrs. Carr: WORDS FAIL to express my gratitude for the clothes I received through your column. Will you please thank the one signed "Your Truly" for the $5. It will buy the shoes so badly needed. I have tried to thank everyone personally for their wonderful response shown in warm coats, dresses and sweaters. And I will ask you please also to thank the kind gentleman who brought the boy's suits and sheep-lined coat. I do not know how to reach him. If he could have seen my little boy's eyes when he looked at these nice warm things, he would, I think, feel repaid. We each said a prayer for all the kind people. MRS. T. S. V.

I am gratified, too, that this could have come through the column and wish to add my thanks.

The Right Job -- By Elsie Robinson

Do you can't find work, youngster? Or maybe you aren't a youngster. Perhaps you're a grown man with a disheartening record of failure behind you... jobs in which you never quite clicked... positions that slipped from your grasp after a few weeks of futile fumbling. Or you may be a woman... seemingly serene and secure... yet actually restless and rootless because you haven't found your niche in life.

Whatever you are, you're filled with the same bitterness at your own fate, the same envy of others, the same feeling that life has gyped you, somehow... that you've never had a square deal.

Gypped? I wonder! Suppose you forget the self-pity for a moment and take a straight look at the picture. You're bright enough. You're willing to work. You can turn your hand to a score of things... Yet you can't get a job... can't find your place in life.

Well, what sort of job--or place--would you like, if you could have it for the asking? Do you know? It's a hundred-to-one shot that you don't.

YOU MAY NOT LIKE that answer... may deny it indignantly. Yet any employer can confirm it, out of his own experience. You are "willing to do anything"--BUT DON'T KNOW WHAT... there's the cause of at least three-quarters of our human failures. We're not kaybed by the Depression... nor by Capitalism... nor by Crookedness Amongst the Big Shots. We're kaybed by our own indecision. We'd rather drift and dream than get down to brass tacks. We'd rather think of all the thrilling things we might be than decide the one definite thing we should be--and then get to work on the job.

In short, instead of picking our own destiny, we expect Fate to choose it for us--and hand it to us on a silver platter. And never has this tendency been as pronounced as it is today, in this Machine Age. From the cradle to the grave, life comes to us ready-made. Overnight we have become the Spoiled Darlings of the Ages... unconsciously expecting something or someone to meet and settle our every emergency.

ENEMIES OVER and UNDER WATER

SOMETIMES A DIVER STAYS DOWN TOO LONG, OR COMES UP TOO FAST.

Men Prove as Dangerous a Threat to Divers as Sharks and Killer Whales--Force Combined With Good Psychology Relieves a Tense Situation.

By JOHN D. CRAIG

This is the fifth of a series of articles on the adventures of John D. Craig, free lance motion picture photographer and deep sea diver, taken from his book, "Danger Is My Business."

I HELD my breath at first, then slowly, tentatively inhaled. Air came into my lungs. It smelled and tasted exactly like the stale air I breathed from my helmet. I stared through the face plate of the helmet into a blue-green void. Everything was very quiet. Tall grasses waved gracefully in the slight current. A silvery cloud of tiny minnows drifted by overhead. More and larger fish gathered around me--speckled ones, striped ones, flat and fat ones. They ogled me without fear and with a sort of cold curiosity. I stood quietly and watched them. The background was a haze of rugged, dark rocks and from them grew a forest of towering kelp--a fairyland forest, I thought, and these fish were its people. Before the glass plate of my helmet stretched a landscape that might have been on the moon, so oddly was it lighted by the silvery green that is daylight under the sea.

I wasn't down very far--about 30 feet--and the Japs let me play for what seemed like a long time. I would probably have stayed far too long had they left it to me, because I was discovering a new world and already planning to come down again with a camera. We went down ages and again, sometimes by ourselves, sometimes with a Japanese diver to lead us around on the bottom. It was a curious bottom of hills, valleys and forests of kelp in which we often became tangled. One day from the surface we saw a beautiful ravine filled with waving sea plants and odd fish. Its sides were very steep and jagged and fully 40 feet deep. A heavy current swept past the place and our chances of dropping from above into the ravine were slight.

One of the Japanese divers offered to guide us into the ravine from a safe place at the lower end where the water would be 85 feet deep, and Crockett and I went down with him. He led us to a slope at one end of the gulch, where there was an easy ascent up to the narrow entrance. The Jap went first; I followed. As we neared the rocks I felt the pull of current. The tidal currents are very strong in the straits south of Cedros, and the ravine had probably been scooped out by them. I braced myself against the drag. Suddenly I saw the Jap ahead of me lifted off his feet, as though by some giant invisible hand. He was swept around a jutting pinnacle of rock. Helpless, dangling in midwater, he was crashed time and again against the face of the rock. Somewhere above, his air line fouled as the current pulled, away and slammed him about. I saw coils of his loose air line come drifting down about us.

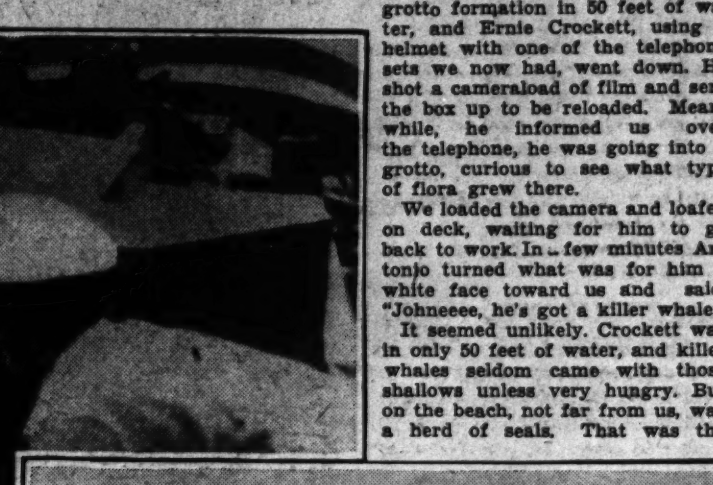

Then he seemed to change--to shorten, to telescope into a dwarf-like figure. The tons of water pressure were crushing his torso into his helmet. His face plate was smashed. I saw coming from it something that looked like gray smoke. The gray smoke was blood. It all happened so quickly that we could hardly realize a tragedy had occurred. A diver had been killed before our eyes.

Later Antonio explained that our helmets, like the dead diver's, had no safety check valve to prevent the air escaping in case the air line were cut or broken as had just happened to the Jap. If we installed check valves, the air would remain in the dress, still acting as a cushion and preventing the pressure of the water from instantly crushing the diver. Although the air line might be cut, it pulled up promptly the diver would be safe. Sufficient air for eight minutes of life remains in the dress.

It would also be safer, he told me, if I sent to California for telephone equipment to install in the dresses. Then the divers could converse with the men on the boat, and many accidents could be avoided. Antonio seemed to like us, and he was so eager that we begin our own operations that I closed a deal with the head Jap diver. We borrowed suits, equipment in general, and a compressor engine, and promised either to return them, or pay a reasonable rent or eventually buy them. Then, with Antonio, we returned to the cannery on Cedros Island.

Diego, who was in charge, had some a thority to distribute supplies and equipment and was glad to give us some old Morse helmets. We disassembled them and fitted the check valves into the helmets on our dresses. Diego was very glad, in fact, to do most anything for us, and one day I discovered he presented his first bill, a staggering addition totaling approximately 1700 pesos. I said I didn't think we owed that much. Diego said we did owe it. All the warmth went out of his voice, and his smile disappeared. He became ugly and sullen.

I decided it was better to play his game. We had plenty of credit with the cannery, since we were going to deliver film to the office in Los Angeles. "All right," I said, "I'll sign." I wrote my name on the bill.

GLORIA... CRAIG'S WIFE PRACTICED AT THROWING A KNIFE.

slapped his face. The greaser reached out to grab him. Campbell hit him half a dozen times in the stomach and danced away. Bewildered, the big fellow went after him. Campbell punched him three times in the face with lefts. The rest of the cannery boys watched, surprised.

We went on with our fishing, affecting nonchalance, but watching out of the corners of our eyes. Gloria kept throwing her knife, as if nothing were happening. Campbell cut the big fellow to ribbons, and only the whistle calling the men back to work saved him from being knocked out.

I didn't tell Campbell I had staged the fight. He was pleased with himself, anyhow, and I knew that the boys on the boat would be proud of him. He had gone up a hundredfold. If the smallest gringo could lick the biggest of them, and the girl could throw a knife--well, it might be better to let such people alone.

THE trouble with Diego and his men was incidental compared to some of the things that were happening to us under the sea. The Japs, we learned from Antonio, were fatalistic about accidents, and had not told us the hazards that a diver faced. We discovered for ourselves the dangers of pressure, the chances we took of getting fouled up in kelp beds, the menace of a sudden fall off an underwater cliff or from a sunken wreck, and the ever-present death that roams through the water in living form.

There are many ways in which a diver can die at his work, we found, and all of them are quick. Even when he suffocates, it is all over in eight minutes, and if a killer whale, shark, manta ray, or octopus gets after him, it is more swift. He may be only wounded by the first bite of a shark or killer whale, but if his suit is ripped the wound does not matter. The water finishes the job.

Of the three types of man-eating shark--tiger shark, white shark, and blue-fin shark--the worst is the blue fin. But all three will attack anything that comes along. Still a shark, even a blue fin, is a slay compared to killer whales. These creatures are by all odds the most voracious, cruel, bloodthirsty things that swim. They are the only real enemies of the whale, other than man.

They are warm-blooded, air-breathing mammals. They grow to a length of 20 to 25 feet, with blunt, ugly heads, and teeth like ice-cream cones. Their mouths are enormous, as is their appetite, and they eat anything. They will attack and smash small boats, and eat whatever falls into the water from them. They have been known to splinter an ice floe one and a half feet thick by hitting it with their heads and their backs.

We finally met one. We were shooting undersea pictures near a grotto formation in 50 feet of water, and Ernie Crockett, using a helmet with one of the telephone sets we now had, went down. He shot a cameraman of film and sent the box up to be reloaded. Meanwhile, he informed us over the telephone, he was going into a grotto, curious to see what type of flora grew there.

We loaded the camera and loafed on deck, waiting for him to go back to work. In a few minutes Antonio turned what was for him a white face toward us and said, "Johnsee, he's got a killer whale." It seemed unlikely. Crockett was in only 50 feet of water, and killer whales seldom came with those shallows unless very hungry. But on the beach, not far from us, was a herd of seals. That was the answer. Crockett had gone 100 feet into the grotto, fussed around, and then observed the water darken. Suddenly Crockett turned around. In the entrance was the head of a killer whale, full-grown.

The fact that he was full-grown saved Crockett. The killer could only push his snout into the cave, He retreated time and again and smashed at the entrance, biting at the rocks and looking wistfully at Crockett. Frustration maddened him. He bit and banged and charged more furiously. Crockett reported it all by telephone.

We were full of good advice. We told him to stay there, to remain calm, and wait for the killer to go. Eventually he did leave, and we waited for him to appear on the surface to blow. He broke water and 150 feet from us. Then he disappeared, and we heard Crockett say "He's back again." Our worst fear was that the killer would see Crockett's lines and bite them, in which case it would be a question of death by suffocation or a modern Jonah in the belly of a whale, clothed in a diver's suit. We didn't mention this possibility to Crockett, and he didn't bring it up, either.

The killer came up three or four times to blow, then returned. I looked at the seals. If they would only put out to sea maybe the killer would follow them. I jumped into the skiff and pulled for shore, and I think I broke some sort of record for speed. I knew about the killer whale's feeling for small boats. The seals headed for the water as soon as I approached, and he pulled myself in the killer came up to blow. He saw the seals and the seals saw him about the same time. He was between them and the shore, and they had no alternative but to head to sea. In a hundred yards he had the stragglers, three of them, inside of him.

We told Crockett what was happening and instructed him to crawl to the edge of the cave, slip the catches on the weights of his shoes, and get ready to inflate his dress for a quick ascent. When the killer hit the corner of the cave with his helmet, knocking himself out. By the time we got his helmet off the killer had disappeared. He may have been on his way back to the cave.

We worked on Crockett for several minutes. The first thing he said when he came to, was, "Why the hell didn't you send me down a camera?"

Correct Lead From Dummy

Crux of Play

Diamond to Assure Contract Chosen by Process of Elimination.

By Ely Culbertson

ANSWER to last Thursday's question. Question 42: You are a white face toward us and said, "Johnsee, he's got a killer whale." It seemed unlikely. What call do you make? (Today's Hand.)

Question 49: Neither side vulnerable, the bidding proceeds: North East South West 1 spade 2 hearts ? You are South and hold: Q 10 6 5 2 7 3 4 8 4 10 8 5 What call do you make? (Today's Hand.)

Question 50: Both sides vulnerable, the bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 spade Pass 3 spades Pass 4 hearts Double ? You are South and hold: K 10 8 5 2 7 3 4 8 4 10 8 5 What call do you make?

THE bidding (both sides vulnerable): West North East South 2 no tr/p Pass 3 no tr/p (final bid) This hand is based on Question 42, answered above.

North opened the spade six. Declarer can count only five sure tricks outside of the diamond suit, hence his problem is to make four diamond tricks, if possible. (Extra heart or club tricks would probably be too "slow". Before West could establish and reach such tricks the opponents probably would get their spade suit established.) The crux then is to select the correct diamond to lead from dummy. Let us reach this by the process of elimination. If declarer leads the diamond queen, South should not and will not cover, inasmuch as he holds three guards to the king. If declarer plays the four spot on this trick, the next diamond lead will have to be won in his own hand and he cannot return to dummy for another finesse. If, on the lead of dummy's diamond queen and South's failure to cover, declarer attempts to hold the lead in dummy by unblocking (i.e., playing the jack or ten under the queen), South will cover the next lead of the nine spot and West will end up with the losing four of diamonds. Obviously, if the five or deuce of diamonds is led from dummy, declarer immediately finds himself in his own hand without a re-entry to dummy and cannot pick up the diamond king.

Now let us examine the effect of leading the diamond nine. If South covers, West wins, leads the four to the queen, and his troubles are over. But South will not cover. The nine then holds the trick, South playing the six and declarer the four spot. Now the queen is led. If South covers, the A J 10 are all good. If South refuses to cover, the lead remains in dummy for a third finesse.

MAN SHOTS TWO WOMEN AND SEVEN IN RESORT COTTAGE

William Oglesby Wounded His Housekeeper and Mother at Clubhouse Portage des Sioux.

ALL IN HOSPITAL AT ST. CHARLES

He Is Not Expected to Live—Younger of His Family Tells of Her Quarrel With Him.

William Oglesby, 933 S. street, shot his housekeeper and mother this afternoon in a house on the Mississippi River Portage des Sioux in St. Charles County and then shot himself in the head.

The women, Miss Wilhelmina Wagner, and her mother, Mrs. George Wagner, 1438 Monroe, were not wounded seriously. Oglesby's wound was expected to heal.

All were taken to St. Joseph Hospital in St. Charles. Miss Wagner, 26 years old, suffered a wound in the neck. Her mother, 60, was shot in the right knee, a bullet which wounded Oglesby's head behind the ear.

Oglesby is a laborer, 59 years old.

Miss Wagner told a Post-Dispatch reporter she had kept house for her mother this afternoon in a house on the Mississippi River Portage des Sioux in St. Charles County and then shot himself in the head.

AMBASSADOR DIECKHOFF LANDS, LEAVES FOR BERLIN

To Report to Hitler on U.S. States Reaction to Nazi Attacks on German Jews.

By the Associated Press.

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 1.—Ambassador Dieckhoff, German ambassador to Washington, arrived here today en route to report to Hitler on American reaction to recent Nazi anti-Semitic action.

There was no official reception for him here. The German liner docked this afternoon and the ship was blocked off as it was impossible for the public to approach him.

Dr. Dieckhoff left Cuxhaven yesterday by train for Berlin. He was summoned home Nov. 18 by Hitler for a report on what was termed by the official German news agency President Roosevelt's "aggressive attitude" after the United States Ambassador, Hugh R. Wilson, was called back to Washington from Berlin.

Nazi officials at that time declined to predict how long Dieckhoff would remain away from Washington.

FIVE IN KANSAS CITY VOTE FRAUD GET JAIL TERM

They Recently Dropped Appeals Sentences Range From Nine to Six Months.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 1.—United States District Judge Herbert L. Reeves today sentenced five election officials in the election precinct of the Third Ward here, convicted a year ago of vote fraud in the 1936 general election. The defendants recently dismissed their appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals and threw themselves on the mercy of the District Court.

James Callahan, Democratic judge, was sentenced to nine months in jail and a fine of $100. James Carter, Democratic precinct captain, eight months in jail and $100 fine; Mike Cummings, Democratic precinct worker, six months in jail and $100 fine; Frank Gejer, Democratic judge, six months in jail and $100 fine.
